

ALEXANDER MAJOR
ACCUSED OF FRAUD
IN BANKRUPT SUITSpecial Master Charges Colonel on Governor's Staff With Concealing His Assets.

OPPOSES DISCHARGE PLEA

Referee Says Property Was Concealed Through Agreement
With F. W. Duttlinger.

A recommendation that a discharge in bankruptcy be refused to Alexander H. Major, a Colonel on Gov. Major's personal staff and a Deputy Game Commissioner, who says he is a cousin of the Governor, was filed in the Federal Court today by Walter D. Coles, Special Master in Bankruptcy. It alleges that Col. Major, with the intention of defrauding his creditors, had concealed a large amount of property.

At the Governor's office it was said that the Governor had not been able to determine what relationship, if any, exists between him and the Colonel. The refusal of a discharge of a bankrupt after his case has been adjudicated is very rare.

Says He Concealed Title. Referee Coles reported that Major, through an agreement with F. W. Duttlinger, concealed the title to his property in Duttlinger's name, and stated at the hearing of his case that Duttlinger was the owner of the property. Coles reported that Major was the actual owner of the property.

Major filed his voluntary petition in bankruptcy Oct. 21, 1913. He made oath to a statement that his liabilities were $18,000, and that he had only $350.00 assets. Coles found that Major had excluded from this statement interest in 2333 McPherson avenue, a farm of 100 acres in Franklin County, Mo., a farm of 300 acres near Quinter, Kan., notes aggregating $100,000, and other property of stock in a mining company, all of which were found to be in Duttlinger's name.

When Major sought to be discharged from bankruptcy last February, Harris Johnson, one of the referees, through his attorney, Oliver de Werthman, made objections on the ground that Major had concealed his property, and that his creditors would be defrauded.

"Used Duttlinger's Name." Master Coles in his report to Judge Dyke, said that for some time before filing his petition in bankruptcy Col. Major had bought and sold real estate and personal property in Duttlinger's name, although in fact he was acting for himself. He charged that Col. Major willfully failed to set forth property he owned in Duttlinger's name in his schedule of assets.

Coles also declared that after the bankruptcy proceedings were begun, Col. Major failed to disclose to his trustee in bankruptcy these assets, and "knowingly and fraudulently" concealed them. The report also charges that Col. Major concealed some of the property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy.

The report must be approved by Judge Dyke, to be carried into effect. If it is approved, the property mentioned in the report must be included in the estate and used to satisfy claims against the estate.

Attorney de Werthman said there was no way of estimating the value of the alleged concealed assets. He said Col. Major had taken advantage of the bankruptcy act once before. Major, he said, was formerly in the automobile business.

Col. Major was not at home when a reporter called for a statement.

I'll Get Men If I Have to Fetch Them," Says Kitchener

Tells Labor Leaders That With Soldier and Munitons He Can Hold War in Hollow of Hand.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The results of the great recruiting rally in England on Saturday are not yet known, but it is generally understood that Lord Kitchener will get the necessary number of men by one means or another.

"I know how many men I want," he told the labor leaders. "I know their names and the numbers on their doors and if they don't come I will fetch them. Give me the men and munitions I want and I guarantee we shall have the war in the hollow of our hands."

RILEY POEMS IN SCHOOLS

Secretary Lane Suggests That One Be Read on Poet's Birthday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Secretary of the Interior Lane today made the suggestion to school superintendents throughout the country that one of James Whitcomb Riley's poems be read in each school on Thursday, Oct. 7, the anniversary of Riley's birth.

In doing so, the secretary calls attention to the fact that Riley and William Dean Howells are the last two survivors of a generation of great literary men who are distinctly American and did much in poetry and prose to reveal the characteristic beauty and struggle of American life.

Woman at Quilsey, Mass., Succumbs When Outwitted Mother Is 'Killed'.

BOSTON, Oct. 4.—As she watched a death scene in a motion picture in the Palm Theatre at Hough's Neck today, Mrs. Florence Lemmon, wife of Herbert E. Lemmon, a Quilsey business man, fell forward in her seat, dead.

Mrs. Lemmon had apparently become excited over a scene in a Western drama, in which the mother of a young outlaw was shown dying from a bullet wound, which she received when she tried to shield her son from a Sheriff's revolver.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 4.—The United States submarines K-5, K-6, K-7 and K-8 were proceeding today under their own power, but with convoys for the naval station at Honolulu, 7,100 miles distant. If they complete without accident the voyage begun at San Francisco yesterday, a new long distance record for United States submarines will have been set. Ten days will be required for the trip.

ANGLO-FRENCH
BONDS OFFERED TO
THE PUBLIC HEREPrice Is 98 and St. Louis Banks
Will Make 1.85 Per Cent on $2,700,000 Subscriptions.

ROCKEFELLER COMES IN

He Is Said to Have Put in a Bid for $10,000,000 of $500,000,000 Issue.

With $2,700,000 subscribed by St. Louis banks to the Anglo-French $500,000,000 war loan, the 5 per cent gold bonds given as security for the loan were being offered to St. Louis investors today at 98. The banks purchased the bonds at 96. This gives them a profit of $18.50 on each $1000 bond sold.

The bonds pay 5 per cent interest at par. At the rate at which they are now offered the yield to the individual investor will be about 5 1/4 per cent on the investment.

The National Bank of Commerce deferred action on the loan when other banks announced their subscriptions Saturday, but it was expected the directors would meet today and vote in favor of participation.

Total subscriptions by St. Louis banks amount to $2,700,000, apportioned as follows: Merchants-Laclede National Bank, $300,000; Boatmen's Bank, $300,000; Mechanics-American National Bank, $300,000; State National Bank, $300,000; St. Louis Union Bank, $500,000; Mississippi Valley Trust Co., $500,000; Mercantile National Bank, $250,000; Mercantile Trust Co., $400,000; Third National Bank, $500,000.

Subscriptions to Underwriting of Anglo-French Loan Close Tomorrow. NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—An announcement, indicating the success of the Anglo-French loan, was made today by J. P. Morgan & Co. It was to the effect that no subscriptions to the underwriting will be received after 10 a. m. tomorrow.

John D. Rockefeller was reported today to have subscribed to the $500,000,000 Anglo-French bond issue. It was said that his subscription was among the largest taken by individual investors, and approximated $10,000,000.

Subscriptions for the loan continued to pour in today. Among those seeking to subscribe were a considerable number of British and French citizens residing abroad. These investors sought the bonds because the rate of interest is a full 1 per cent higher than that on the previous internal loans.

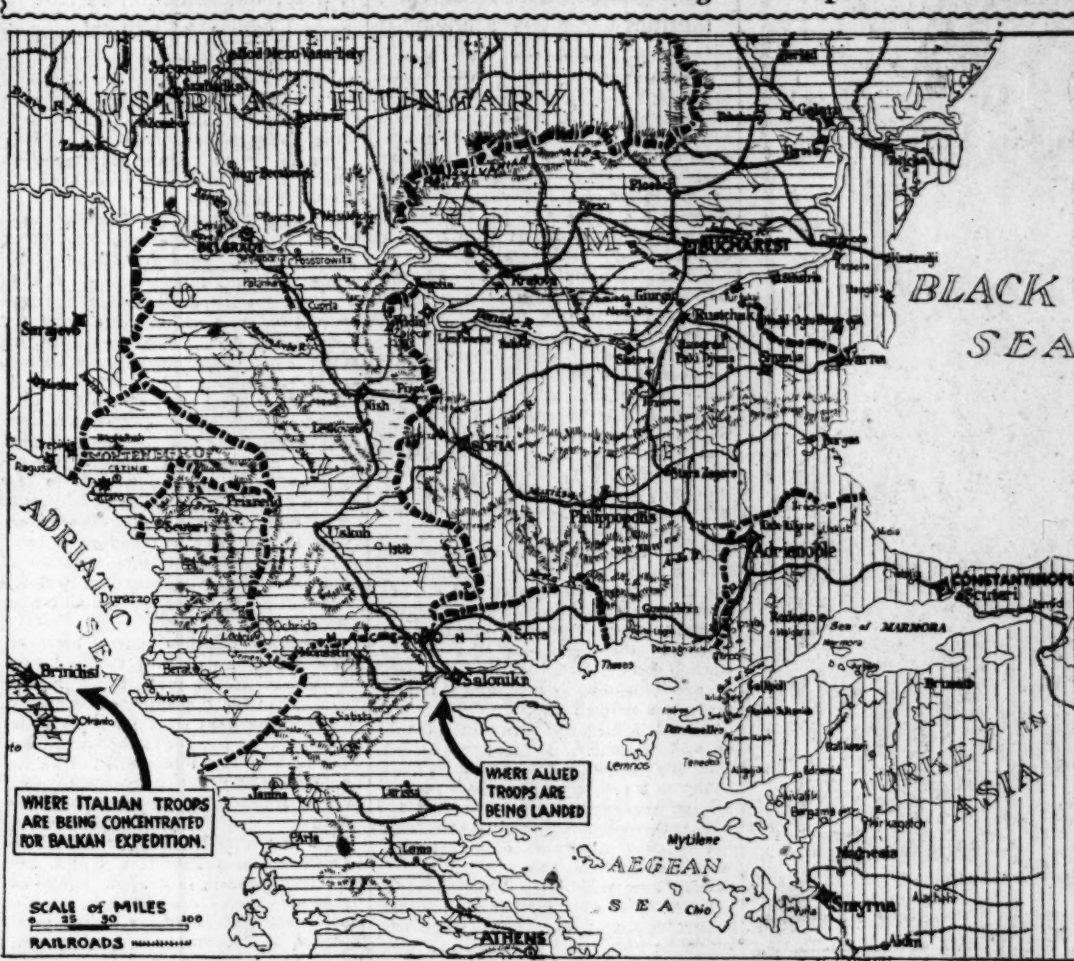

In every case, however, their subscriptions were rejected today.

England Advises Its Investors Not to Purchase Any of Bonds.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Reports that persons in England have been attempting to subscribe to the Anglo-French loan being raised in the United States on account of the fact that the interest yield is higher than that on British domestic loans, elicited the following statement from the Government today:

"The Treasury points out that it is very undesirable in the public interest that persons or firms in the United Kingdom subscribe to or purchase the forthcoming Anglo-French loan in America. The main purpose of the loan is to give support to the American exchange. Remittances from the United Kingdom for the purpose either of subscribing to or purchasing the loan or of replacing funds already in America would be a serious loss to the Treasury."

Map of Balkan States, Showing Main Railroads and Where Allies Are Assembling Troops for Attack

THE perpendicular lines on the map indicate the countries that are aligned, or likely to be, with the Germanic cause, while the horizontal lines indicate national sympathies with the allies. French and English troops are being landed today at Saloniki, a Grecian port, while a large Italian army is being assembled at Brindisi for transportation to whatever Balkan points at which they may be needed for holding the threatened Germanic invasion of Serbia in check.

The purpose of the German drive is to force a way through Serbia, so that the great railroad from Belgrade to Constantinople by the way of friendly Sofia, and Bulgaria can be used for transportation of munitions from Germany and Austria to the Turks.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—President Wilson, Secretary Daniels and Chairman Padgett of the House Naval Committee decided today at a conference at the White House that the naval program for the coming session of Congress shall include the addition of fast battle cruisers to the American fleet.

The navy now has none.

The conference discussed the naval estimates more than an hour. Afterward Secretary Daniels said the program had not been completed, but that the report made to him by Naval Constructor McBride, who returned from England last week after investigating naval lessons of the European war, had convinced him that fast warships of powerful types were absolutely essential to a well-balanced navy toward which his recommendations would tend.

Naval Constructor McBride has communicated to Secretary Daniels the results of his investigations in England and France. No direct reports have been received from Germany and Austria, but general information regarding the German navy is in the hands of the Navy Department.

President Wilson will confer Wednesday with the Advisory Board, headed by Thomas A. Edison, who is in Washington discussing plans with Secretary Daniels.

Witness Says Taggart Passed Out Money on Primary Day

Handed Out $1 and $2 Bills to Men in Saloon, Testifies Former Police Official.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 4.—Thomas Taggart, indicted with Mayor Joseph E. Bell, who is on trial for election conspiracy, handed out a roll of money in $1 and $2 bills on May 3, 1914, primary day, according to John F. Nugent, former Assistant Chief of Police of Terre Haute, who pleaded guilty before Federal Judge A. B. Anderson in the Terre Haute election case.

Nugent testified today he was in Indianapolis that day, talked to Taggart in a hotel bar, together with Edward Holter, then Chief of Police of Terre Haute, who is now in the Federal Prison at Leavenworth, Kan., and Robert (Hawshaw) Henderson, a city employee of Terre Haute, also indicted with Mayor Bell.

The witness said Taggart took Henderson to the end of the bar and gave him something and that Henderson took him (the witness) outside, said to him: "I got the stuff," and showed him some money in $1 and $2 bills.

Bulgaria Denies Germans Are in Control, Says Acts Are Not Provocative.

By Associated Press. ATHENS, Greece, Sunday, Oct. 3.—All doubt as to the entrance of Greece in the war on the side of the entente allies now has been disposed of. The official organ of the Government says that the landing of French troops at Saloniki is for the purpose of assisting Greece.

The governmental organ says that if for the present the Government considers the assistance of the allies as premature it is none the less to aid and support Greece that the allies are at Saloniki. France and England enter the Balkans as traditional friends of Greece and not otherwise. The Greek Government has seized Macedonian railroads, of which two are Austrian and one French.

It was reported unofficially last week that the entente allies had landed troops near Saloniki to co-operate with the Greeks against Bulgaria. No official announcement to this effect has been made, but the foregoing dispatch indicates that such a movement either is impending or already has been made.

BULGARIA DENIES
GERMAN CONTROLSofia Government's Policy Not
Provocative for Anyone,
Official Statement Says.

Formal Oct. 2, via London, Oct. 4.—Formal denial that German officers have taken control of the military affairs of Bulgaria, and that Germany is supplying that country with funds are contained in an official statement issued through the Bulgarian News Agency.

"The text of the statement follows: 'In view of erroneous, and frankly mendacious statements circulated in the foreign press regarding the situation in Bulgaria, we are authorized to deny in the most formal manner all these rumors.'

"First, concerning the arrival in Sofia of German officers who are alleged to be taking a hand in the administration of the railroads or command of the troops; second, concerning alleged statements of Premier Radoloff, that as long as the war lasts Bulgaria will receive regularly from Germany $10,000,000 monthly; third, concerning numerous rumors which are said to have been caused by international disturbances.

"As to the assertions of certain newspapers that the Radoloff Cabinet will not be qualified to direct the destiny of Bulgaria, because it will not have a majority, we must observe that in a parliamentary country, which Bulgaria undoubtedly is, the Government, which is said not to have supported the Premier with a sufficient majority in the Sobranie, would not be able to remain in power. Since the Cabinet of M. Radoloff took over the affairs of the country over two years ago, its position never has been shaken. After all, there is nothing provocative in its policy for anyone, and it is astonishing to see the attacks made in part of the foreign press against the attitude of the Bulgarian Government."

Von Mackensen Said to Be on Serbian Frontier, Preparing to Attack.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 4.—Two hundred and fifty thousand Austro-German troops, with 300 guns, mostly withdrawn from the eastern front, already have arrived on the Serbian frontier, and preparations for an attack are being hurried forward under the direct supervision of Field Marshal von Mackensen, who has established his headquarters at Veresce, says the correspondent of the Epoca.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The Paris Temps states that some Russian troops stationed at Odessa are intended for a campaign against Bulgaria.

The quadruple entente, it is reported,

Concentration of the Bulgarian army has begun, according to a dispatch from Athens to the Havas News Agency. The total effective of the Bulgarian army engaged in this movement are estimated at 350,000.

GERMANS GAIN AGAINST BRITISH

Berlin Admits Loss of Part of Trench to French Near Givency.

BERLIN, via London, Oct. 4.—A further gain for the Germans in the struggle with the British near Loos was reported today by the War Office. The French succeeded in wresting from the Germans part of a trench near Givency.

French Aviators Bombard Metz and German Roads and Stations.

P. R. H. S., Oct. 4.—French troops have continued to make progress to the north of Arras, according to the announcement of the War Office this afternoon, which says:

"We have continued to make progress to the north of Arras in the Forest of Givency and at Hill No. 119. Here we occupied the crossroads of five highways.

"There has been almost continuous fighting with hand grenades and bombs, accompanied by artillery fighting from each side, in the vicinity of Quennevillers and of Neuville.

"In the Champagne district there has been artillery fighting in the vicinity of the Navarin farm.

"Yesterday evening two counter attacks on the part of the enemy to the north of Mesnil were repulsed.

"One of our air squadrons has thrown down on the Sablonis Railroad station at Metz no fewer than 40 shells of heavy caliber. Other French aviators have continued the bombardments from the air of the railroad lines, junction points and railroad stations behind the German front."

German Repulse British Attacks; Aviators Bombard Luxembourg.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Few changes of importance in the military operations in France, Russia or Austria were recorded in the official statements issued yesterday at the various capitals.

Berlin announced that repeated attempts by the English Saturday night to regain territory lost by them north of Loos were repulsed with heavy losses.

East of Soches a French advance failed. "Notwithstanding the employment of a considerable quantity of gas grenades," in a nocturnal hand grenade engagement the Germans lost a section of trench extending over a length of about 40 yards. Saturday the French repulsed their infantry attacks in Champagne. The Germans say the French repeated their aerial attacks on Loos and Vouliers. At both places several civilians were victims. Bombs were dropped by French aviators on the neutral city of Luxembourg. (Where the Kaiser is said to be in headquarters.)

Two Luxembourg soldiers, one workman and one shopgirl were wounded.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Casualty list published today includes the names of 119 officers and 3607 men.

Stanfield, commander of the Second Gordon Highlanders; Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Parkin, commander of the Seventh Battalion of the Northamptonshire Regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel Godfrey Morris of the Eighth Gurkhas, and Lieut. Brown, son of the Earl of Kenmare.

German Paper Advises Servia to Let Supplies for Turkey Pass.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 4.—Protesting against Sir Edward Grey's warning to Bulgaria that she would be held strictly accountable for aggressive action against the allies' friends in the Balkans, the Hamburg Nachrichten proposes not to let the blockade be imposed which has been caused in the entente nations. The paper declares Germany and Austria have no purpose except the temporary occupation of the Serbian bank of the Danube in order to assure necessary supplies for Turkey, since Rumania refused to permit the transit through its territory of such war material.

"If, therefore, Servia is prudent," the paper says, "it will let the supplies pass."

14 MEMBERS AND HEALER QUIT FIRST SCIENCE CHURCH

Leon Greenbaum Withdraws Through Conflict With Authorities Over His Teaching.

Reports of friction in the First Church of Christ Scientist, King's highway and McPherson avenue, which has brought resignations from at least 15 members were confirmed today by John Ashcroft, first reader. Leon Greenbaum, a healer at 406 McPherson avenue, withdrew through a conflict with the church authorities, and the others have resigned in sympathy.

Greenbaum has announced that he has formed a new congregation which will meet temporarily in a hall he has rented at Taylor avenue and Olive street. He has been conducting Christian Science services at his home and the homes of some of his sympathizers.

Ashcroft said the trouble arose when Greenbaum set himself up as a Christian Science teacher. The manual of the Mother Church at Boston provides that no person may teach who has not received instruction from the metaphysical college the church maintains in Massachusetts or has studied in Boston under the direct supervision of the Board of Education of the church.

Such a person, Ashcroft said, received a certificate which entitled him to teach. Without the certificate the Mother Church recognizes no person as a teacher and Greenbaum, according to Ashcroft, has no teaching until they were notified several weeks ago that they were violating the rules.

Greenbaum refused to discuss the details of the trouble further than to say it involved a matter of metaphysics which he considered too abstruse to be outlined in an interview. He said he was preparing a complete statement to be made public later. The question as to the interpretation of the provision in the manual as to the qualifications of a teacher, he intimated, was of minor importance.

He declared that for some time a rupture in the Christian Science churches all over the country has been apparent. Sooner or later, he declared, it would affect all Scientist, on way or the other. Ashcroft, when told of this remark, said he had heard no murmurs of a prospective schism and seemed to think he would know something about it if an important one were imminent.

It was reported at first that 30 members had resigned from First Church, but Ashcroft said only 15 resignations had been received.

Cartoonist Falls to Death.

Chicago Man Thought to Have Lost Balance When Sitting in Window.

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Stewart W. Carothers, a cartoonist of the Chicago Herald, fell to his death from a fifth-story window of a downtown hotel early today.

Two of the guests said he was sitting in the window getting relief from a headache when they noticed it. It is believed that he lost his balance. His mother, Mrs. Nell Carothers, lives in Fayetteville, Ark. He was unmarried.

Bests Fear of Train at 79.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 2.—Joseph Fee, 79 years old and the oldest pioneer of Knoxville, where he has lived since 1849, has just taken his first ride on a railroad train, going to Tracy, a 14 mile trip.

Fee has resided within a mile of the railroad for 49 years, a branch line passing through his land. But he has always had a peculiar dread of "the cars." A few years ago his friends threatened to rope the old man and take him to the State fair. They abandoned the plan when he vehemently declared he would kill every man in the crowd if such a thing were ever attempted.

NEW GERMAN NOTE ON ARABIC CLOSER TO AMERICAN VIEW

Fails to Disavow Sinking of Ship, but Situation Is Not Considered Critical.

By Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Although Germany's new note on the Arabic case is not entirely satisfactory to the United States, the situation is not considered critical, it was stated today on high official authority.

The view held by the President and the State Department on the note, which was handed to Secretary Lansing Saturday by Count von Bernstorff, is that it is not specific enough on the points insisted on by the President. These are a disavowal of the sinking, assurances that the act would not be repeated and proper reparation.

Careful reading of the note has convinced nearly all approaches the stand of the United States than it did in previous notes on the same question. It is understood that the note gives satisfactory assurances that Americans traveling on unarmed liners will not be endangered, but a satisfactory disavowal of the sinking of the Arabic is not given.

The note was the subject of a conference between President Wilson and Secretary Lansing last night. While officials decline to comment, in view of the confidential character of the negotiations, it became known today that Count von Bernstorff will be requested to come to Washington, when he will be made acquainted with the attitude of the Washington Government toward the communication.

It was learned that Germany, after examining the evidence submitted by the United States, came to the conclusion that the Arabic was not a military transport, but a passenger liner.

President Wilson's Position.

President Wilson has taken the position that the United States cannot abdicate questions involving the loss of American lives, and it is believed that in the next step the Washington Government will indicate that the only matter it can submit to arbitration is the amount of the damages to be paid after the question of liability itself already has been admitted.

Naval Experts Virtually Convinced.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Naval experts designated to examine the pieces of metal said to have been found on board the Allan liner Hesperian before she sank off the Irish coast, Sept. 4, are virtually convinced that the vessel was wrecked by a mine. Their findings will be submitted to Secretary Daniels this week.

SIR JOHN FRENCH TELLS HOW BRITISH MADE THEIR RECENT GAINS IN FRANCE

First Official Account Says German Line 6500 Yards Long Was Taken—King and Kitchener Congratulate Troops.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The first official report telling in some detail of what the British troops accomplished in the recent offensive in France and how it was done is contained in orders of the day issued by Field Marshal Sir John French, the British commander in chief, and made public yesterday at the British headquarters in France.

The following are the special orders of the day:

"The Field Marshal, commander in chief, has received the following message from the King, dated the 30th of September, 1915:

"I heartily congratulate you and all ranks of my army under your command upon the success which has attended their gallant efforts since the commencement of the combined attack. I recognize that this strenuous, determined fighting is but the prelude to greater deeds and further victories. I trust the sick and wounded are doing well."

"GEORGE R. AND L."

"The following reply has been sent to his majesty:

"Your majesty's forces in France are deeply grateful for your majesty's most gracious message. There is no sacrifice the troops are not prepared to make to uphold the honor and tradition of your majesty's army and to secure a final and complete victory."

"J. D. P. FRENCH, Field Marshal."

Message from Kitchener.

"The Field Marshal commander in chief has received the following message from Earl Kitchener dated the 27th of September, 1915:

"My warmest congratulations to you and all serving under you on the substantial success you have achieved, and my best wishes for progress in your important operations."

"KITCHENER."

"Special order of the day by Field Marshal Sir John French, commander in chief of the British army in the field:

"We have now reached a definite state in the great battle, which commenced on the 26th inst. Our allies in the South have repulsed the enemy's last line of reinforcements and effected large captures of prisoners, guns and tents."

"The French army on our immediate right has been heavily opposed, but has brilliantly succeeded in securing an important position known as the Vimy Ridge."

"The operations of the British forces have been most successful and have had great and important results. On the

Berlin Reports Capture of the French Airship Alsace and Its Crew

YESTERDAY'S official statement from the War Office told of the capture of a French airship. The statement said:

"In the Rethel district, the French airship Alsace was forced to make a landing, and the crew was taken prisoner. (Rethel is on the Alsace, 25 miles northeast of Rheims.)

The French airship Alsace was one of the largest and most powerful in the service of the country. It was a dirigible of a type developed since the war began. A French War Office statement, issued Oct. 1, stated that, in the preceding night, it bombarded the junction of Amagne/Luquoy and the stations of Attigny and Vliers. The airship was shelled all along its journey, but returned safely to its base, having been hit only by a few splinters of shells, which caused no damage.

throughout the battle and by the officers and noncommissioned officers.

"I feel the utmost confidence and assurance that the same glorious spirit which has been so marked a feature throughout the first phase of this great battle will continue until our efforts are crowned by final and complete victory."

J. D. P. FRENCH, Field Marshal Commander in Chief, British Army in the Field, 30th of September, 1915."

Correspondent Tells How the French Captured Hill 191.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—A field correspondent of the Havas Agency, in a dispatch received today, gives further details of the struggle between the French and the Germans for Hill 191, one of the heights of Massiges in Champagne, which was captured by the French in spite of the German staff order that it must be held at all costs.

The Hill, the correspondent says, was believed by the Germans to be impregnable. The position was taken Sept. 25 by the colonial troops.

"Down the other side of the hill," says the correspondent, "the allied troops advanced methodically, reaching Mount Tetu toward the north and then eastward. As each trench was reached the Germans, in small groups, held up their hands. One officer, who was made prisoner, said:

"We can't make them move except by the use of the cudgel or revolver."

"During the fighting 3000 grenades were captured and used against the enemy, as well as 77 guns, each with a supply of 200 shells. A French officer said he could not find time to conduct prisoners back to the line, as all of the men wanted to stay with the advancing forces."

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter that one's system collects. If you have a pale face, yellow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headache, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

HAND WARMER FOR DRIVERS A NOVELTY OF THE AUTO SHOW

It Can Be Attached to Steering Wheel and Makes Gloves Unnecessary.

Forest Park Highlands today was being transformed into a paradise for motorists in preparation for the annual St. Louis Automobile Show, which will open there tonight.

Booths were being decorated with bunting, flags and streamers and many cars were being shown. A feature in the exhibition spaces. All of the leading models will be on view, and in addition to the display of machines of all makes and sizes there will be an unusually complete and elaborate display of accessories.

One of the season's novelties is a hand warmer which can easily and quickly be attached to the steering wheel. This enables the driver to keep his hands at a comfortable temperature without the necessity of wearing gloves, which are always in the way and hamper free movement in steering.

The selling of accessories has come to be one of the most important branches of the automobile trade and the business has grown to such an extent that many large department stores now sell automobile parts. Several of these stores will have attractive exhibits at this year's show.

Owners of cars will find much to interest them at the show. A feature will be lectures by experts representing various exhibitors. After hearing them all talk the autist will know more than he did before and will still be free to draw his own conclusions as to which of the many cars on exhibition has the best "talking points."

The exhibits of automobiles and parts will cover a greater portion of the Forest Park Highlands area. Even the theater has been pressed into service for exhibition space.

The show will open at 7 o'clock tonight and through the remainder of the week it will be open from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

The engagement of Miss Josephine Verdin, daughter of Mrs. Josephine Verdin of 4300 McPherson avenue, to Arthur M. Idler was announced this afternoon at a small tea given in honor of Mrs. Frank Balke of Indianapolis, Ind., by the bride-elect.

MRS. BEIDEL TELLS WOMEN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her in Health for 14 Years.

"It was several years ago that I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I then suffered terribly at intervals. My husband bought me a bottle of it and it helped me right away. Then after my second child was born I had a female ailment very badly and I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and in a short time was cured and have been in excellent health since. I always praise the Compound whenever I have an opportunity as I know it helped me and will help others. Lately I have given the Compound to my daughter, and I wish all suffering women would take it and be convinced of its worth."

MRS. J. A. N. A. BEIDEL, 113 N. Penn Street, Shippensburg, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

WOMAN TELLS OF GOOD BEING DONE BY MILK LEAGUE

Hundreds of Families Would Be in Distress and Many in Mourning but for Relief.

CONTRIBUTIONS.
Previously acknowledged $4758.00
Pakoble Club Y. W. C. A. 1.25
Total $4759.25

"It isn't necessary that I give my name, is it?" inquired a woman who contributed $1 to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund Saturday. The question was her response to a request made in order that due credit might be given in the record. It wasn't necessary, of course, that her identity be disclosed, hence the acknowledgment of that amount yesterday as cash. There are several similar acknowledgments each year.

"I only wish it were practicable for me to make the sum 100 times greater," the unidentified woman said. "I have seen, and therefore know, what immeasurable good is being accomplished through the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund—not all, of course, but enough to assure me that there would be hundreds of families in sore mental distress and many in mourning for the loss of little ones but for the relief obtained from that source."

"Were it feasible to bring the men and women of St. Louis face to face with the anguish in the tenement districts of the city, resultant from poverty and illness of babies, it would be task for the girls and boys to roll up $10,000 annually for relief purposes instead of less than half that amount. This condition is not peculiar to St. Louis, I suppose, but is to be found in every community approaching the importance of a city."

"The difficulty about the undertaking of the Pure Milk and Free Ice League lies in the fact that only a comparatively few of those who are able to help in the relief are acquainted with the urgent need of it and many, not knowing through personal observation, do not feel the responsibility as they should. They do not recognize it as any part of their duty because they take at a large discount reports of the distress, whereas the accounts of it are mildly drawn. I doubt that even the Post-Dispatch has anything like full knowledge of the conditions which it has striven for years to alleviate and is alleviating in large measure, through co-operation of the children of the city, who accept as true what is related to them without waiting to be convinced by personal contact with the suffering, physical and mental, of the very poor."

St. Louis Union Bank, Fourth and Locust, pays 3 1/2 per cent on all savings from Friday, October 1st, if deposited on or before Tuesday, October 6th.

BRYAN NOT WITNESS IN CASE OF WOMAN SLAYER OF DOCTOR

HILLSBORO, Tex., Oct. 4.—Mrs. Joseph Kirkpatrick, who tragically closed W. J. Bryan's peace speech at the Hillsboro County Fair, Saturday afternoon, by emptying the contents of two revolvers into the body of Dr. A. C. Saylor, 42 years old, was released on bond and went to the home of her father at Bynum, Tex. She refused to talk, beyond saying: "I have killed Dr. Saylor, that is all."

When told that Mrs. Saylor was in a critical condition from shock over the tragedy, Mrs. Kirkpatrick replied: "Now she knows how I and my two little children felt over the murder of my husband."

Kirkpatrick found Dr. Saylor at his farm home one day last winter. Kirkpatrick stabbed and slightly wounded the physician. A few days later Dr. Saylor shot and killed Kirkpatrick. He was convicted and given a 25-year sentence. The Court of Appeals reversed the case. At the trial Mrs. Kirkpatrick partially admitted friendship with the physician, but denied any wrongdoing. Recently she has been brooding over her husband's death.

Bryan will not be a witness at the trial, as he missed seeing the killing. He heard the pistol shots as he was leaving the grounds.

MINNEAPOLIS VOTING ON SALOONS
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 4.—A county option election, which is a life-and-death struggle for saloons in Minneapolis, is being fought today. The campaign was the hottest ever waged in Hennepin County. The "wets" are predicting victory by 1000. The "drys" say they will win by 10,000.

Minneapolis, with a population of more than 250,000, is one of the largest cities in the country to vote on the prohibition issue. The heaviest vote in the history of the city is expected.

There are about 400 saloons in Minneapolis.

Collection of V. P. Souvenirs at the St. Louis Union Bank.
An interesting display of Vellied Prophet invitation and souvenirs owned by John P. Boyce, 628 Forest Park boulevard is now on exhibition at the St. Louis Union Bank. The collection numbers more than fifty different pieces and consists of the complete series of the favors since 1894. One of the most interesting souvenirs is a miniature Japanese pagoda, which will be remembered by older followers of the Vellied Prophet. There is also a display of special coin struck off to commemorate the Panama-Pacific Exposition, consisting of two $50 "alugs," one round, the other octagonal, a $250 gold piece, a $1 gold piece and a peculiar silver half dollar.

BROTHER AND SISTER WHO AIDED POOR BABIES

JAMES LANDECKER, RUTH LANDECKER

Boy Confesses to Stealing Gum.
Joseph Costello, 10 years old, of 610 South Fourth street, and James Duross, 12, of 230 South Fourth street, were arrested yesterday afternoon when they left a vacant building at 206 South Broadway, in which policemen later found 11 boxes and 53 extra packages of gum. Costello admitted that he and three other boys "jimmied" a window in the warehouse of the American Cigar Co. 312 Elm street, Saturday night. He said Duross had nothing to do with the burglary.

"I only wish it were practicable for me to make the sum 100 times greater," the unidentified woman said. "I have seen, and therefore know, what immeasurable good is being accomplished through the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund—not all, of course, but enough to assure me that there would be hundreds of families in sore mental distress and many in mourning for the loss of little ones but for the relief obtained from that source."

"Were it feasible to bring the men and women of St. Louis face to face with the anguish in the tenement districts of the city, resultant from poverty and illness of babies, it would be task for the girls and boys to roll up $10,000 annually for relief purposes instead of less than half that amount. This condition is not peculiar to St. Louis, I suppose, but is to be found in every community approaching the importance of a city."

"The difficulty about the undertaking of the Pure Milk and Free Ice League lies in the fact that only a comparatively few of those who are able to help in the relief are acquainted with the urgent need of it and many, not knowing through personal observation, do not feel the responsibility as they should. They do not recognize it as any part of their duty because they take at a large discount reports of the distress, whereas the accounts of it are mildly drawn. I doubt that even the Post-Dispatch has anything like full knowledge of the conditions which it has striven for years to alleviate and is alleviating in large measure, through co-operation of the children of the city, who accept as true what is related to them without waiting to be convinced by personal contact with the suffering, physical and mental, of the very poor."

St. Louis Union Bank, Fourth and Locust, pays 3 1/2 per cent on all savings from Friday, October 1st, if deposited on or before Tuesday, October 6th.

Bryan will not be a witness at the trial, as he missed seeing the killing. He heard the pistol shots as he was leaving the grounds.

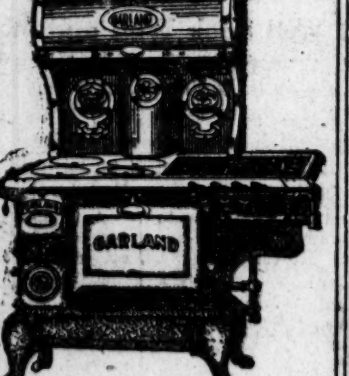

MINNEAPOLIS VOTING ON SALOONS
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 4.—A county option election, which is a life-and-death struggle for saloons in Minneapolis, is being fought today. The campaign was the hottest ever waged in Hennepin County. The "wets" are predicting victory by 1000. The "drys" say they will win by 10,000.

Minneapolis, with a population of more than 250,000, is one of the largest cities in the country to vote on the prohibition issue. The heaviest vote in the history of the city is expected.

There are about 400 saloons in Minneapolis.

Man Dies Striking in Chair at Home.
Louis C. Helling, 74 years old, of 39 North Fifteenth street, died while sitting in a chair at his home yesterday. Heart disease is believed to have been the cause, but an autopsy has been ordered.

Collection of V. P. Souvenirs at the St. Louis Union Bank.
An interesting display of Vellied Prophet invitation and souvenirs owned by John P. Boyce, 628 Forest Park boulevard is now on exhibition at the St. Louis Union Bank. The collection numbers more than fifty different pieces and consists of the complete series of the favors since 1894. One of the most interesting souvenirs is a miniature Japanese pagoda, which will be remembered by older followers of the Vellied Prophet. There is also a display of special coin struck off to commemorate the Panama-Pacific Exposition, consisting of two $50 "alugs," one round, the other octagonal, a $250 gold piece, a $1 gold piece and a peculiar silver half dollar.

Actual service tests in hundreds of homes prove it will cook and bake perfectly with coal and gas. We guarantee it.

C. H. BAILEY DIES; REALTY AGENT FOR NEARLY 60 YEARS

Associates Say That Up to Few Years Ago He Averaged $5,000,000 a Year in Sales.

Charles H. Bailey, who died yesterday afternoon at his home, 53 Westmoreland place, at the age of 75, had been in the real estate business in St. Louis almost sixty years, had made a fortune in commissions and was looked upon as the most successful real estate agent in St. Louis.

Bailey made his largest profits in the launching of big West End subdivision propositions. He was a keen judge of the city lot possibilities in farm lands lying close to the city limits, or even within the city limits. Small subdivisions did not appeal to him, although he laid out some of these. The big tracts that could be made over into exclusive residence subdivisions appealed to his vision.

When he felt that the time was ripe for converting pastures into city lots he went to the owner of the pasture land and obtained an option. Then he went to clients who had plenty of money and pointed out to them the growth of the city in the direction of that particular pasture land and asked them if they wanted in on a syndicate which would develop the property and place it on the market.

Developed Parkview Tract. His clients had complete confidence in his judgment in such matters and were always willing to stake their money on the correctness of his estimate of the possibilities. The syndicate was organized and the property subdivided and sold and he reaped his harvest or commissions.

The Parkview tract was developed by him and the clients he interested in it and was one of his most profitable deals. He also was identified with many important deals in the business section.

As the cop. of the business cards and his letter heads and other printed matter was always "1866," the year in which his business career began.

Bailey had as clients most of the old St. Louis families. He organized their syndicate which purchased and laid out the Catlin tract, which was afterward sold to an Eastern syndicate for $1,000,000.

He was the agent for Vandeventer place when that tract was sold to an exclusive residence place in the city and sold every lot in it twice, and some of the lots three times. His own home was in Vandeventer place up to two years ago.

He sold at auction the lots on Lindell boulevard, from Sars street to Euclid avenue, when the boulevard was first laid out. He sold the Lindell Hotel twice. His business associates say his sales, up to three years ago, averaged $5,000,000 a year, on which his commissions were about $5,000 a year. His last important sale was of the Benoit Building, from Condo Benoit to Louis Alee, in 1912. Although the Junior Realty Co. was incorporated in 1880 to do the business, Bailey was at the office of the company every day until ill health compelled him a few months ago to give up active business life.

He made varied investments from his very large income, but throughout his business career it was rather as an agent than as an investor that he made his largest gains. He formerly owned, however, considerable property around the old St. Louis Fair Ground and laid out tracts including Bailey, Grand, Roosevelt and Peck avenues and Grove street. He was one of the founders of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. and was a stockholder in six other local banks.

The illness which caused his death began in the summer when he was at his summer home at Jamestown, R. I. After his return to St. Louis he was for a time at Barnes Hospital. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Bailey; a sister, Mrs. Emma Waters, who lives in Paris, and two orphan grandchildren, Frances and Marian Smith, 16 and 14 years old, who are expected ultimately to inherit the estate. Their father, Irwin Smith, who was associated in business with Bailey, died two years ago, leaving an estate of about $1,000,000. Their mother died about seven years ago.

Bailey was born in St. Louis, reared in the Union army and rose to the rank of Captain and Quartermaster. The funeral will be held from the residence at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Interment at Bellefontaine Cemetery will be private.

MEN IN AUTO AND WAGON FIGHT

One Shot and One Kicked in the Row Taken to Hospital.

Two groups of men, one in an automobile and the other in a wagon, engaged in a fight yesterday afternoon after they had left the Davis street ferry in Carondelet. The men in the wagon told the police they had been assaulted without provocation, but an eyewitness said he saw the men in the wagon throwing stones at the automobile party.

One man jumped from the auto and after dragging Ben Winkler, an ice dealer, of 464 South Compton avenue, from the driver's seat on the wagon, kicked him in the face. Another member of the auto party stood up in the car and fired a shot from a rifle at Roy O'Hara, a teamster, of 2016 Louisiana avenue, who was sitting in a back seat of the wagon. The bullet struck him in the left arm. The auto party drove away and O'Hara and Winkler were taken to the city hospital.

Status of Washington for West Point. WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A bronze equestrian statue of Gen. Washington has been presented to the military academy at West Point through an anonymous source. The donor insisted that the gift be described as "donated by a patriotic citizen and veteran of the Civil War."

DEFAULTER WINS HONORS IN WAR

French Embroider Who Escaped Jail Dies of Wounds.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—A romance of the war has been revealed by the death in hospital of a soldier of the French Foreign Legion.

In 1912 a French notary named Chantalon was condemned in his absence to penal servitude for life for embezzling

$100,000. By some means his friends managed to hide him in Paris. On the war breaking out the defaulting notary, under a false name, joined the legion and subsequently went to the front. There he distinguished himself on more than one occasion and was mentioned in the orders of the day. In a hot encounter with the Germans he was seriously wounded and has since died in hospital.

STONE AND REED FACTION PLANS STATE CONVENTION

Tentative Scheme Is to Pledge All Candidates for Governor.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 4.—A plan to hold a Democratic State convention for the purpose of eliminating from the next primary campaign the members of the administration who are candidates for nomination for governor and other State offices is being considered by members of the Democratic State Committee, it became known here today.

It is known that the plan has been discussed by Speaker Clark, Senators Reed and Stone and Chairman McClung of the State Committee.

The leaders, it is said, while believing that such a convention would be for the benefit of the State, hesitate openly to back the movement for fear that they would be accused of attempting to evade the primary law.

The plan is that a convention be held to select a State ticket for the primary. An attempt is to be made to get all prospective candidates to agree to leave the field to the winner in the election, but the plan is to hold the convention even if the candidates do not agree.

The leaders believe that any candidate who goes into the primary with the endorsement of a convention composed of representatives from every county in the State, selected in the old convention manner, would win over others who would oppose him.

McClung Said to Oppose Plan.

They do not believe they would have difficulty in getting Secretary of State Cornelius Roach, one of the most active candidates, to agree to the plan, but they doubt that Attorney-General Barker would go into it.

It is understood here that Speaker Clark and Senators Stone and Reed are agreeable to the convention plan, but that Chairman McClung is opposed to it. It is thought significant that although McClung called a meeting of the State Committee in St. Joseph Friday, he was not in St. Joseph and less than a quorum of the committee was there. The call was so worded that some members of the committee concluded that there was no business of sufficient importance for them to attend. If the meeting had been held the convention plan would have been called up for discussion, it is not to be immediately acted upon.

The convention plan probably would eliminate McClung as a candidate for State Treasurer. It is also thought it would eliminate all the candidates for Governor except Supreme Judge Graves, and that it would eliminate John P. Gordon as a candidate for re-election as State Auditor. The convention would name candidates for all offices.

The members of the State Committee have been informed of the plan with the instructions to discuss it with the members of the county committees so that they will be prepared to act when the plan is formally proposed at some future meeting of the State Committee.

The action of such a convention would not legally be binding, but it probably would have great weight in a primary.

ACCIDENT VERDICT IN DEATH OF KANSAN SHOT BY WIFE

She Testifies She Fired at Man at Door Who Refused to Talk.

STOCKTON, Kan., Oct. 4.—The Coroner's jury investigating the shooting of Preston Haines by his wife Saturday night, this morning brought in the verdict of accident.

The wife testified that Haines and his hired man, John Billings, wished to go to a dance at Bow Creek, but she refused to go and asked Haines after a heated argument to stay at home. Haines and Billings went in Haines' automobile to the home of Billings' parents and got Ethel Billings, sister of John Billings, to go with them.

About 10 o'clock Mrs. Haines telephoned the dance hall and told her husband to come home as she was frightened. Then she went to sleep. Later she was awakened by a sound outside of the screen door. She asked "Who is there?" but received no answer. She stepped outside on the porch and saw the shape of a man. She told him to stop. He did not and she fired twice with a shotgun. One charge hit Haines in the neck, killing him. She then went to the prostrate form and discovered it to be her husband.

Mrs. Haines testified that Miss Billings worked for her last summer and that she had discharged her because of Haines' attentions to her. Once, she said, she saw Haines enter a room where the girl was in bed, place his hand on her shoulder and whisper to her.

GAFFNEY TO DEMAND INQUIRY

U. S. Consul at Munich, However, Announces He Will Resign.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Thomas St. John Gaffney, United States Consul-General at Munich, Germany, has announced that he will resign in accordance with a request from Washington, but that he will ask for an investigation of his case.

Gaffney was asked to resign because of his past utterances on the European war. He is charged not only with being a strong German partisan, but with being equally anti-British, although responsible for the administration of British affairs in his consulate.

Gaffney issued a statement to the press at Berlin Saturday in which he denied he had given offense to the British colony in Munich or that his conduct had been such that he could be justly convicted.

CATHEDRAL SCHOOL PLANNED

Archbishop Glennon, at the New Cathedral yesterday, announced that a meeting would be held Thursday evening in New Cathedral Chapel to plan for the erection of a parish school to cost between $75,000 and $100,000. This will be the first time the Cathedral of St. Louis ever has had its own school.

The school is to accommodate 600 children. Two sites are being considered, one fronting on Maryland avenue, west of the parish residence, and the other at Newstead and Maryland avenues.

Lost Auto Found, Youth Arrested.

An automobile belonging to George C. Week, an undertaker at 415 Duchouquette street, was taken at 8:30 o'clock last night from 2618 South Grand avenue. Arthur Murphy, 17 years old, of 4108 Connecticut street, was arrested an hour later, while driving the car at Grand and Gravois avenues.

The Chalmers Motor Company spent $90,000 for one machine to make Chalmers fenders the finest in the world.

Here is a thought for the careful buyer. Ponder it—

QUALITY is built into Chalmers Cars in Chalmers Shops. They are not "assembled." It is beyond the limits of human mechanical ability to "assemble" Chalmers quality and balance in a motor car.

DEFAULTER WINS HONORS IN WAR

French Embassador Who Escaped Jail Dies of Wounds.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—A romance of the war has been revealed by the death in hospital of a soldier of the French Foreign Legion.

In 1912 a French notary named Chantalon was condemned in his absence to penal servitude for life for embezzling

$100,000. By some means his friends managed to hide him in Paris. On the war breaking out the defaulting notary, under a false name, joined the legion and subsequently went to the front. There he distinguished himself on more than one occasion and was mentioned in the orders of the day. In a hot encounter with the Germans he was seriously wounded and has since died in hospital.

Americans Destitute in Australia.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A large number of Americans who have gone to Australia without any assurances of employment, are destitute there. United States Consul-General John P. Bray at Sydney, N. S. W., today advised the State Department.

STONE AND REED
FACTION PLANS
STATE CONVENTION

Tentative Scheme Is to Pledge All Candidates for Governor.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 4.—A plan to hold a Democratic State convention for the purpose of eliminating from the next primary campaign the members of the administration who are candidates for nomination for governor and other State offices is being considered by members of the Democratic State Committee, it became known here today.

It is known that the plan has been discussed by Speaker Clark, Senators Reed and Stone and Chairman McClung of the State Committee.

The leaders, it is said, while believing that such a convention would be for the benefit of the State, hesitate openly to back the movement for fear that they would be accused of attempting to evade the primary law.

The plan is that a convention be held to select a State ticket for the primary. An attempt is to be made to get all prospective candidates to agree to leave the field to the winner in the convention, but the plan is to hold the convention even if the candidates do not agree.

The leaders believe that any candidate who goes into the primary with the endorsement of a convention composed of representatives from every county in the State, selected in the old convention manner, would win over others who would oppose him.

McClung Said to Oppose Plan.
They do not believe they would have difficulty in getting Secretary of State Cornelius Roach, one of the most active candidates, to agree to the plan, but they doubt that Attorney-General Barker would go into it.

It is understood here that Speaker Clark and Senators Stone and Reed are agreeable to the convention plan, but that Chairman McClung is opposed to it. It is thought significant that although McClung called a meeting of the State Committee in St. Joseph Friday, he was not in St. Joseph and less than a quorum of the committee was there.

The call was so worded that some members of the committee concluded that there was no business of sufficient importance for them to attend. If the meeting had been held the convention plan would have been called up for discussion, if not to be immediately acted upon.

The convention plan probably would eliminate McClung as a candidate for State Treasurer. It is also thought it would eliminate all the candidates for Governor except Supreme Judge Graves, and that it would eliminate John P. Gordon as a candidate for re-election as State Auditor. The convention would name candidates for all offices.

The members of the State Committee have been informed of the plan with the instructions to discuss it with the members of the county committees so that they will be prepared to act when the plan is formally proposed at some future meeting of the State Committee.

The action of such a convention would not legally be binding, but it probably would have great weight in a primary.

ACCIDENT VERDICT IN DEATH OF KANSAS SHOT BY WIFE

She Testifies She Fired at Man at Door Who Refused to Talk.

STOCKTON, Kan., Oct. 4.—The Coroner's jury investigating the shooting of Preston Haines by his wife Saturday night, this morning brought in the verdict of accident.

The wife testified that Haines and his hired man, John Billings, wished to go to a dance at Bow Creek, but she refused to go and asked Haines after a heated argument to stay at home. Haines and Billings went in Haines' automobile to the home of Billings' parents and got Ethel Billings, sister of John Billings, to go with them.

About 10 o'clock Mrs. Haines telephoned the dance hall and told her husband to come home as she was frightened. Then she went to sleep. Later she was awakened by a sound outside of the screen door. She asked "Who is there?" but received no answer. She stepped outside on the porch and saw the shape of a man. She told him to stop. He did not and she fired twice with a shotgun. One charge hit Haines in the neck, killing him. She then went to the prostrate form and discovered it to be her husband.

Mrs. Haines testified that Miss Billings worked for her last summer and that she had discharged her because of Haines' attentions to her. Once, she said, she saw Haines enter a room where the girl was in bed, place his hand on her shoulder and whisper to her.

GAFFNEY TO DEMAND INQUIRY
U. S. Consul at Munich, However, Announces He Will Resign.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Thomas St. John Gaffney, United States Consul-General at Munich, Germany, has announced that he will resign, in accordance with a request from Washington, but that he will ask for an investigation of his case.

Gaffney was asked to resign because of his partisan utterances on the European war. He is charged not only with being a strong German partisan, but with being equally anti-British, although responsible for the administration of British affairs in his consulate.

Gaffney issued a statement to the press at Berlin Saturday in which he denied he had given offense to the British colony in Munich or that his conduct had been such that he could be justly convicted.

CATHEDRAL SCHOOL PLANNED

Archbishop Glennon, at the New Cathedral yesterday, announced that a meeting would be held Thursday evening in New Cathedral Chapel to plan for the erection of a parish school to cost between $75,000 and $100,000. This will be the first time the Cathedral of St. Louis ever has had its own school.

The school is to accommodate 40 children. Two sites are being considered, one fronting on Maryland avenue, west of the parish residence, and the other at Newstead and Maryland avenues.

Lost Auto Found, Youth Arrested.

An automobile belonging to George C. Weick, an undertaker at 412 Duchouquette street, was taken at 8:30 o'clock last night from 2618 South Grand avenue. Arthur Murphy, 17 years old, of 4108 Connecticut street, was arrested an hour later, while driving the car at Grand and Gravois avenues.

HOW AUSTRALIANS SACRIFICED SELVES IN ANZAC CHARGE

Two Brigades Volunteered to Draw Turks' Fire in Face of Almost Certain Death.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—As illustrating the difficult and desperate character of the fighting in the Dardanelles, at the same time paying tribute to the fighting qualities and heroism of both Australian and Turk, Capt. E. W. Dean, official press representative with the Australian forces, sends a belated description of the "glorious charge" of two Australian light horse brigades (dismounted) at Anzac.

The attack of these two brigades (full strength 1000 men) occurred at a spot where natural obstacles made success impossible, but the movement was regarded as necessary in order to draw Turkish troops away from points where real advances could be made successfully. Only one man in six of the Australians who left the trenches got back safely.

The two scaling ladders they carried with them are lying out there in the scrub, about half way to the enemy trenches, and there are a number of tumbled little heaps of that dull-souped, colored Australian khaki which is the hallmark of unrecorded heroism on every field on this peninsula.

No Victoria Crosses.

"You can piece together a few simple deductions to the details," he says. "There are no Victoria crosses, here are no birthday honors, but I know just this, that for sheer self-sacrificing heroism, there never was a deed of history that surpassed the charge which the two Australian light horse brigades made in the first light of Saturday, Aug. 7, in order to help their comrades in a critical moment of a great battle."

After describing the preliminary bombardment of the Turkish position by artillery, which lasted a half hour, Capt. Dean tells of the actual infantry advance which really consisted of separate charges on three sides of irregular shaped ridges, abreast of which the Turks had planted infantry defense works. In the first of these movements the second line men were ordered to advance two minutes after the first line, the third line coming along after another two minutes. The orders were obeyed as if by a machine, although every man knew death was almost certainly awaiting him at the top of his own parapet, from machine guns of the Turks. Describing the Turkish fire at this point, Capt. Dean says:

"One knew nobody could live in it. Many fell back wounded before they even had cleared the parapet. Others started but managed to crawl back before being hit a second or third time. Col. White had run only 10 yards before he stopped. The Turkish guns drew a line which none would pass, and a man who fell wounded often was hit six or eight times more as he dropped."

"It was all over within a quarter of an hour," but in the extreme southeastern corner of the Turkish trench there did appear for just two minutes, a small flag indicating the presence there of a group of our men. No one saw them get there. Nobody ever will know who they were. For two minutes the flag fluttered and then an unseen hand tore it down."

After a description of similar successful charges on other sides of the ridges, Capt. Dean concludes his story by stating that the only man who returned from the Turkish parapet reported that the Turks there had their packs on and were in a full marching order, probably being ready to hurry off to reinforce lines further north, where this attack in the center delayed them.

"The Australians had, in the richest and fullest measure, achieved the object for which their help had been needed at a critical point," declared the Chronicle of their charge.

"This place always will be sacred as the scene of two very brave deeds. The first—let us never forget it—was the desperate attack made by the Turks across this same neck at dawn on June 30 and the second was this deed of self-sacrificing bravery which never has been surpassed in military history—the charge of Australian Light Horse into certain death at the call of their comrades' need during the crisis in the greatest battle ever fought on Turkish soil."

PASTOR ENGAGED TO TWO GIRLS

He Resigns After Church Trustees Warn Him to Leave Effingham, Kan.

ATCHISON, Kan., Oct. 4.—Because he was engaged to two women at the same time the Rev. R. L. Morrow has resigned from the Christian Church in Effingham. The church trustees had warned him to leave town.

Two months ago the minister became engaged to Miss Ethel Bohannon, who has $50,000 in her own name. Miss Bohannon went to Excelsior Springs, Mo., in August and Morrow followed. His attentions were observed by a friend of the preacher's other fiancée, Miss Anna Schulz of Des Moines, Ia.

Miss Schulz appeared in Effingham last Monday with 75 love letters written to her by the pastor, in which it is said he denied paying attentions to Miss Bohannon.

Surely "beer" is a poor description of such a master brew as

FALSTAFF

"the choicest product of the brewer's art"

—for its perfect character has lifted it far above the level of the ordinary beer; to the very highest place in public appreciation.

Its flavor—so exceptionally fine; its color—so beautifully clear; its character—so perfectly balanced—proves the seventy-five years' brewing experience that has gone into its making.

Beer is food. Bread and beer are made of the same materials: cereals, yeast and water. Bread is solid; beer is liquid—both are highly nourishing. Physicians prescribe beer to produce energy, build tissue and strengthen nerves.

By CARLOS F. HURD.
HENRY BLOSSOM, St. Louisan and librettist, and Victor Herbert have dared to make "The Only Girl" a musical comedy without a chorus. The result of their efforts, which might be termed a parlor operetta, was highly enjoyed at the Shubert last night.

The nearest approach to a chorus is the concerted work of seven statuesque young persons, in the second and third acts. They are not a chorus, for they are individually gowned, nearly every one has an individual part, and they violate chorus traditions by singing with tunefulness and spirit. As for that anomalous and unlabeled biped, the chorus man, there is not so much as a false note or a mismatched pair of cuff buttons to suggest him. And he is not missed.

Blossom adapted "The Only Girl" from "Our Wives," a comedy by Frank Mandel. Without knowing the ratio of adaptation to originality in this case, one can say that the librettist chose his theme well and that the seams of dual authorship have been so joined that no impression of patchwork is given. The plot is not of the sort which keeps an audience in suspense. It is rather of the sort which convinces by obviousness. Such a plot requires clever situations, and this requirement is well met.

Feminine Follies Featured.
The story is that of a librettist, who is one of a bachelor quartet. His three comrades marry at about the same time and the first gathering of their wives, at the studio of the surviving bachelor, is a merry cross-cross of jealousies and misunderstandings. The bachelor enjoys his friends' discomfort, but not so much as he would enjoy it if the "only girl" had not already made her appearance for him. She is a composer, and he, being a "woman-avoider," has reluctantly engaged her as his collaborator after he had been charmed by one of her compositions, floating in at his window from her adjoining apartment.

In composing this air, Victor Herbert had to do what he did in "The Serenade," namely, to make a tune which would be recognized, whenever it should be heard in the course of the play, by everyone who has any discernment whatever as to tunes. If the air becomes a popular favorite, as that of "The Serenade" did, so much the better. Perhaps this one will—but the tune which my ears carried away was not this central and oft-repeated air, but the "Equal Rights" trio in the last act, which is a daintily piping bit of harmony. Some male quartet work of the college type appears in the bachelor scene. Fourteen musical numbers are distributed through the three acts.

To return to the plot, it all quite obviously leads up to this—that the composer shall throw her pretty self at the librettist's head. This is hardly what would be called a great dramatic opportunity for so attractive a young woman as Miss Wilda Bennett. In fact, the part of the wife of the librettist's tall Scotch friend, McMurray, is a more exacting one, and Vivian Wessell takes it very satisfactorily. Thurston Hall, who takes the librettist's part, is a former Suburban Garden leading man, and he made a pleasing central figure. Ernest Torrence, as McMurray, was capital, and while the Drama League seems to object to "the conventional stage butler," I will venture to say that the man-servant role, taken by John Findlay, contributed to make this play enjoyable.

There's Another to Come.
While St. Louis is seeing this Blossom-Herbert success of a year ago, New York is seeing "The Princess Pat," by the same pair. Press notices of the new work have been, for the most part, very favorable. It was to open last Monday night, but the sudden death of a woman engaged for a leading role caused a postponement until two nights later.

Constipation and the Natural Way To Correct It

CONSTIPATION is the cause of most illness. It has been termed the "great modern curse."

It is largely caused by a lack of cellulose in the foods we eat. In most foods made from wheat the bran (cellulose) has been removed.

The natural way to cure constipation and to keep fit is to eat a little bran each day.

There is a vast difference in brans!

KELLOGG'S BRAN (Cooked)

is different from all others. It is palatable because it is cooked.

You can serve this bran from the package with sugar and cream. It is good to eat and good for you at the same time.

Keeps you well for about a half a cent a day.

Ask your grocer—not for merely "bran," but for Kellogg's (Cooked) Bran.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Single Fare to the Fair
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
I read your interesting editorial entitled "Educational value of fair," and am surprised at anyone calling it a "horse-racing proposition." I am a poor man, but I look back at those dear old days of yore when I, a child of the slums, walked out to the fairgrounds, hustled around and got myself something to eat, collected empty glasses and got a glass of pink lemonade for each 10. I also watched all the interesting machines on display. To be brief, I kept my eyes wide open and I saw things that developed my interest. I never saw wheat threshed or corn husked, except at "the fair." How many of our slum children are in such a position? Right now my finances are not in the best condition and my wife did not want to go to the expense, but remembering "the days I shall see no more," I have arranged to have my family see the fair on Monday this year. I want them to grow up and have the fair as dear to their hearts as it was to mine. They shall never miss one, and the educational feature is what I expect my children to benefit by.
Now, one thing is necessary for the success of the fair, and that is a single fare. Can't the Weston cars be straight through? Also, can the Hiedamont cars turn out to the grounds? A switch can be put in in no time.
Now, Mr. McCulloch, be a good sport; do something for old St. Louis. A FAIR ONE.

The Woman Problem
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
"Woman's place is the home." But where will be the homes for 5,000,000 women of Europe for whom there can be no husbands after the war?
PILLY LOO.

A United People.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
I wish to compliment the Post-Dispatch editor who wrote the editorial in yesterday's issue, "We Have a Fatherland."
If read carefully and thoughtfully, there is a great deal said in those few lines and should take away all prejudice for any particular nation in this present war and if every editor of the United States would say more about our glorious free country, especially along these lines and less about other nations, there would be fewer people who would carry a prejudice for any foreign nation.
E. SCHROEDER.

No Law to Cover This.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
I noticed in the other morning's paper that the police of St. Louis are going to arrest anyone caught using "slappers" and throwing confetti on the Velled Prophet night in the city. This is by order of Chief of Police Young. Now, don't you think it would be easier to arrest the parties selling these annoying devices, as I think the proper way to eliminate evil is to get to the root of it. If these "slappers" and confetti were not sold it would be easier for the police to arrest the people using them.
J. FRANKLIN CAREY.

A WAR ILLUSION DISSIPATED.

Whatever the success of the present movement on the western line, one of its permanent effects must be greatly to lessen the German sense of security and greatly to modify the German conduct of the war.

With two of the most powerful nations of the earth, England and France, assembling almost their entire might on the west—assisted by a third, Belgium—Germany was content to divide her army and leave the much smaller moiety of it to oppose them. It seemed even impudent in its daring, but that in this as in other respects she had calculated correctly has been shown for more than a year. She relied on the security of trench fighting and the elaborate mechanisms that now count for as much as men in battle.

The new drive of the allies, however, adds another to the illusions which this war has dissipated. At Liege, at Namur, at Maubeuge, at many places in Galicia and Poland, it had been shown that fortifications, no matter how strong, cannot stand against modern high-explosive projectiles.

Now a further thing has been shown. Trenches are no more invulnerable than forts embodying the most formidable handwork of engineering skill.

Given sufficient guns of proper type, high explosive ammunition in unstinted quantities and men proportioned to the task, concrete trenches protected with barbed-wire barriers and defended with Maxims and swarming with trained troops can be stormed with comparative ease.

What, disquiet this may bring to Germany and how much it may affect her well-matured plan of warring can be appreciated by recalling the events of the past year. If her own attempts in the west convinced her that she could not carry the allies' trenches without losses too great to be thought of, they also satisfied her that the allies could not carry her trenches without ruinous sacrifices. She has continued since Sept. 12, 1914, to "kite military checks," as the Washington Times calls it—to shuttle masses of men back and forth between the eastern and western fronts, according as they were needed.

Now, for a country vastly outnumbered and surrounded by enemies, this is practically the only recourse—to leave a thin line, in such defensive capacity as can be provided them, to oppose greater forces while she assembles preponderating forces against an enemy somewhere else.

But if the thin line can no longer be left in the former security of defense in trenches—if indeed they are abandoned to certain peril in the presence of a resourceful enemy in greater number—with superior artillery—what resource is left to strategy?

What invulnerable substitute can German ingenuity provide for the vulnerability of trenches?

Fare forth to the Fair!

THE PASSING OF TIPPERARY.

The substituting of the hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers" for Tipperary by the English soldiers at the front for their war song, shows a marked change in the trend of their thoughts. The flippant boy who left home a few months ago, has been metamorphosed into the serious man.

Tipperary was a good lively tune to keep up their spirits in marching away from home, but in the trenches it sounded grim. To endure those horrible shambles something to raise their thoughts above the surroundings was imperative. Is it strange they turned to religion?

When public records cease to be public it is time for a new deal.

GOOD WORK FOR THE MILK FUND.

With the $1000 contributed by Frank R. Robertson out of the receipts of his Travelogue entertainment at the Odeon, the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, on Saturday, reached the gratifying total of $4757.94—not much below the record, and $1132 above the average for the 10 previous years during which the fund has been in existence.

This thousand dollars contributed from the Travelogue proceeds will be the means of saving many babies from sickness or death. It means the success of the fund. The bills will be paid, and the work of the Pure Milk Commission, which goes on all the time, will not be hampered by lack of means. The contribution is also an evidence that the Robertson Travelogue entertainment, with its fine pictures of Europe in war time, was appreciated by the people of St. Louis. It gave them an opportunity for doing much good, and at the same time they were enjoying a high-class, educational show.

Gratitude is due to all who have made the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund so successful. The children of St. Louis have done splendid work all through the long season. They have earnestly and persistently shown their determination that their less fortunate tiny brothers and sisters shall be helped in the best possible way, by being given life-saving food and care.

AMONG THE FALLEN.

Doughty Siegfried of Niebelungen fame was as proud of "bringing down" the ferocious bison (called wisent in his day) as he could be of his most daring exploit in battle or tourney; and Charlemagne did not consider it beneath his dignity to place himself at the head of the bravest among his warriors to engage the king of game with his own hand, and to drive the martial herds out of the forests of Saxony, where they had occasionally routed his battalions.

Nine feet from horns to haunch and of man's height, the royal beast was ever ready to pit his massive strength against the most chivalrous steel of the middle ages. Civilization gradually drove the bison back to the interminable forests of Russia, whence he had originally come.

So delicious was his meat, and so hazardous the sport of hunting him, that all the huntmen of Europe considered the Russian game season as the climax of enjoyment. Meanwhile the herds became ever smaller, and Peter the Great, prematurely turned back the annual wave of hunters, and restricted the vian to the royal table.

Before the present war only about 400 head were corralled in the forest of Bialowicz, District of Grodno. That primeval forest, 17 square miles in extent, nestles in hill-bound valleys, made almost inaccessible by a belt of marsh lands. It was recently the momentary shelter of the retreating Russian army, which was unable to rescue the last of the bison from the pursuing Germans.

The fate of the small herd can readily be gleaned from the words of the Vossische Zeitung: "It is to be hoped that some zoological garden may contain a specimen of the last of the European bison, easily the king of game; though this hope may be sterile from the fact that the Russian Government has grudgingly given one animal to the Berlin garden in 25 years, and that one died 10 years ago."

EXTERMINATING THE ARMENIANS.

No general denials, no diplomatic evasions can offset the careful investigation made by the American committee on Armenian atrocities. From beginning to end its report is based on the testimony of witnesses for whom the committee vouches.

For six months the Turks have carried on a campaign of race extermination in Asia Minor. In cold blood they have plundered and murdered Armenians, here and there offering the official pretext of "military necessity." Wherever there were Armenian populations their homes have been sacked and they have been driven into exile, helpless and starving. Mothers and infants, girls and old people, by tens of thousands, have been herded like beasts, left to perish by the wayside or to die of neglect after their removal from their villages. The non-Moslem men for the most part had already been impressed into the Turkish army to fight the Russians, and by way of return their families have been scattered, their women and girls subjected to outrage and the young, sick and aged left without means of subsistence.

In all the history of Turkish brutality there has been no blacker chapter than the atrocities inflicted upon the Armenians since last April. Back of it all is the deliberate policy of the Turkish Government to wipe out a people differing in race and religion with their rulers. The military and local officials are executing the orders received from Constantinople with the ferocity of savages.

The world has had frequent reminders of the fanatic cruelty of the Turk toward the Christian populations in the Ottoman Empire. But what will it say to Germany's condoning Turkey's guilt in the present instance? As the Power that brought Turkey into the war, that has dominated the Turkish Government and dictated its policies, and that prepared the way for the Armenian atrocities, Germany should have something to say different from Von Bernstorff's virtual approval of the outrage called a military necessity.

Allies bonds and German bonds are both on sale in St. Louis, and neutrals are investing.

CHAUFFEUR EYES.

The French Government, according to the Paris Temps, has just received the report of the board of experts on color-blind chauffeurs. The report contains 187 typewritten pages, and reached the conclusion that color blindness does not in any manner interfere with the efficiency of a professional chauffeur, as he is not called upon to read colored light signals.

The Government had also submitted to the commission the question of bespectacled automobile drivers. On that head the report states, that spectacles, if carried on frames fixed behind the ears, cannot interfere with efficiency, though nose-glasses should be prohibited, as positively unsafe, for the jolting of the machine makes them lose their focus and may thereby lead to catastrophes. In accidents where chauffeur or passenger wore fixed eyeglasses, says the commission, not one out of over 400 cases examined showed injury to the eye from fracture of the lenses; the injury, if any, always was to the tissue surrounding the eye.

In ancient Media it was regarded as a reproach to a man to have fewer than seven wives. The laws of the Medes may have to be started in Europe after the war.

WIRELESS TELEPHONES AND THE MUSE.

"Speak to the earth," says one of the majestic figures of the Book of Job.
Some of the finest imagery of all languages is based on magnified human capacities and human senses. Magic qualities attributed to speech and hearing are frequent in the imaginative touches of older poets, perhaps because they were themselves accustomed to recite their own works and test their own ability in wide appeal to attentiveness.

But what becomes of much of this fine imagery when an apparatus is set up on Arlington Heights, from which the Potomac can talk to San Francisco Bay?

When a great leader is described as speaking to the nation in trumpet tones, it is the moral and intellectual power of what he says that is referred to. But what strength is left to this form of expression when a President at his desk in the White House can make some very ordinary remarks on so worn a subject as the tariff during the pendency of a campaign and be sure that 100,000 slender poles erected in every county and perhaps every township in the country will catch his utterance for anybody who cares to listen.

We have thought that a particularly splendid line in which Emerson speaks of the shot heard round the world. But it will never mean the same thing to us after we know that the snap of a toy pistol at the same historic point can now be heard at Honolulu and when the additional apparatus is provided can, after being literally heard round the world, have its sound transmitted back to where the embattled farmers once stood and where the rude bridge spans the flood.

If we have gained much in this wonderful telephonic transmission of the voice to the ends of the earth, we have lost something. Invention, which has enlarged the range of the prosaic utilities of civilization, has been doing the same thing to the imagery of poetry and inspirational prose for hundreds of years.
Invention, child of necessity, and poetry, child of a lineage in which nothing so stern as necessity has a place, are sworn enemies. That is the reason why the poetry of today lacks the bold, striking figures of older poetry, why the poet of today has lost much of the appeal of the ancient poet.

Every new form of wireless only adds a sadening handicap to the already throttled Muse.

THE PANAMA SLIDES.
THERE seems a disposition to believe that somebody has blundered at the Panama Canal, but we imagine it is not that. The Isthmus of Panama is not a stable strip of terra firma, and no one knew that better than the men who built the canal. It is a quagmire, with the Cordilleras themselves resting upon a foundation even less secure than that of Chicago. The Gatun Lake, which accounts for something like sixteen of the forty miles of the canal, is a permanent risk. The slides in Culebra are probably no greater than the builders of the canal fancied they would be at times. Even the slides of a big railroad cut slide down for a few years, and that condition is reproduced upon a much greater scale at the canal. There are two soft sides and one soft bottom. The only stable thing about the cut through the mountains is the sky. The sky will probably always remain in place; the slides never for long; the bottom seldom, if ever. When the canal was built, it was considered that in point of time and money more would be saved by dredging the canal out after it was built than by shaving the slides back to a point from which they would hardly start anything except under very unusual conditions. Let us be neither too dubious nor too sanguine about the Panama Canal. We could not choose the place where it was to be made. Nature did that. We could only do the best we could do on a very unstable footing, and we are probably getting no more than our due for the service. We will weather the storm, blow as it may, and keep right on keeping on. We are that kind of bearcats.

THE ALCHEMIST.
FROM roaring factory chimneys
Belches the leaping flame,
And the sweating trolleys fashion
A product they dare not name.
White-hot from the blast-furnace
Runs the steel to the sandy mold,
And the Alchemist in his glory
Changes crude steel to gold.
And the thing conceived in secret,
Mentioned with whispered breath,
Brings no joy to the builder.
For it has for its purpose death.
They toil in the cheerful daylight,
Catching the gleam of gold,
But night has a thousand terrors
When the steel is dead and cold.
And what of the haughty masters
Who drive while the toilers strain,
Who thrust into bulging pockets
What mere thrift could never gain?
Do they hear in their dreams far thunder.
The hiss of a hurtling shell,
Or see the grewsome havoc
Where the scattering fragments fell?
Masters and men like demons
Forge and fashion and mold,
And their output is grim destruction,
And their income is precious gold.

CLEANING.
SLATER—Sponges made of soap and gasoline. Dust them thoroughly.

MRS. F. L.—You might try fuller's earth for cleaning sofa cover and piano scarf. Apply it dry, with a brush.

MARY ELLEN—You might try washing stiffened chemise gloves once again, using plenty of soap and not rinsing.
MARION—Sprinkle wine stain well with salt; moisten with boiling water, then pour boiling water through it. Or hold spot in vessel of milk while it is boiling. (For Dewey decimal index see Answers Sep. 12.)
ANNA—If corduroy is of good quality, it may be scrubbed with a cloth, wrung out in alcohol. Or mix equal parts of alcohol and ether. This should remove the grime. Sponge first with the pile, then against it, and dry in the sun.

VERY TRULY.—The answerer is not a cancer expert, and had no idea of deciding anything as to the Ottery serum. When medical journals say that surgery is still the sheet anchor in cancer treatment, the answerer is not responsible for the statement. Should he ever have cancer he will investigate as thoroughly as possible before trying any sort of doctoring. What the Progressive Medicine Association says, that surgery is likely to meet opposition. Although Lister, the ingenious English physician, had discovered as early as 1867 that the "blood poisoning" and other ill effects of surgical operations were due to germs and dirt, the enemy, bacteria, jealously and opposition of the medical profession kept Lister and his humanitarian discoveries hidden and suppressed for 20 years more. It was not until 1902, 35 years later, that his medical colleagues in London ceased to revile Lister and call him names, and began to give him due credit for his marvellous discoveries. In the meantime, as to cancer, it is increasing, and doctors are still disagreeing.

When Love Dictates

Having to decide between the keeping of her husband's affection or the acknowledgment of fame suddenly thrust upon her, a woman makes choice—a woman's choice.

By Mary Boynton Clark.

EARFULLY Miss Clarice bored a hole in the top left-hand corner of the pile of manuscript. When the knife had gone completely through the sheets she inserted a piece of dainty blue ribbon. She tied the ribbon in a knot. She rolled the manuscript in a wrapper and wrote the address of a famous publishing house. She hurried rather furtively into the street, bought some stamps at the postoffice, and mailed them. She dropped the package into the box. And she walked nonchalantly in a happy dream. She had sent her first novel to the publishers.

She sang as she went about her work that evening. Her mother was surprised at the girl's happy demeanor. "I believe it's going to be Jim Thorn after all," she said to her husband.

"He's a good fellow," answered the father slowly. "I guess he's a little beneath the girl, though. More like me, Jim is. Clarice could get someone better."

"But nobody that loved her more," answered his wife.

Clarice, seated with Jim in the parlor, was bubbling over with the secret. She was waiting to tell Jim, as soon as he gave her an opening.

They were as good as engaged, and everybody knew it. Jim had a substantial farm on the outskirts of the town; he had money in the bank; he was the new type of prosperous, progressive farmer.

"Clarice," he said, as they sat very close together, "when are you going to let me ask you that question?"

Clarice looked up at her lover frankly. She was very fond of Jim. But—there was that intangible, elusive "but." How was she to say to him that she wished he interested himself in higher things?

Jim Proposes.

Jim was speaking before she could begin. "You know, Clarice," he said, taking her hand, "we've been as good as engaged for years. When you came back from high school I was spared for a while for fear I'd lose you, but you weren't that kind. Clarice, you don't forget. And I love you just as much as I've always loved you. Won't you say 'yes' to me?"

And in another moment even the novel was forgotten in the joy of knowing that she loved and was loved.

"Jim," she ventured presently, "do you know you never asked to see my story?"

"Jim," she ventured presently, "do you know you never asked to see my story?"

Jim laughed and laid his hand upon hers.

"My dear little girl," he said, "I guess you don't know much about authors, do you? Remember that fellow that milked the cows for me last summer? He was an author. Went broke, and I kept him for his work wasn't worth his bread alone, much less his pay—I kept him all summer. He told me a thing or two. There isn't money in it, and it's all a swindle anyway. Suppose you do sell some magazine story? That doesn't bring in the bread and butter regularly. Of course, you wouldn't need that, but don't you see, dear, one has to be practical? Now you can do all the writing you want as my wife, and I mean to give you a pretty easy time—only you mustn't get impractical, Clarice. I've lowered his voice. "You know, dear, I always think a woman's task is to keep her house neat and look after things and such."

The Problem Is Faced.

Clarice was eminently practical, only not in the same way as Jim. That night she faced the problem with her own frankness. If she could never share those hopes with Jim—and she knew that she could not—she resolved that she should never come between them. She would abandon them. She would take up the part of wife and mother. She would live for Jim. She would be everything to him.

And, once the decision was made, it was astonishing how quickly she forgot all about her novel.

She had signed it with a pen name. She had given no address. To her it seemed a terrible undertaking, something that was liable to call down on her the scathing ridicule of the publishers, if they knew who she was. No doubt, she thought, the novel would find its way quietly into the wastebasket, and that would be the end of it.

It seemed a foolish little dream of the past six months later, when she was established as Jim's wife in his home. Jim was everything to her. He even tried—she could see that to interest himself in literature. It was so dear of him! And his delight when she whispered to him the momentous secret made her cry for happiness. There would soon be three of them—a little world of three! How weak and vain the old dreams had been!

He brought her home some books. "There," he said, laying them down, "here's 'Ebennesser's Polly.' They say it's the talk of the country nowadays. We'll read it together. And here's 'When We Were Young.' Everybody's raving over that. The book-fellow told me in the shop. Why, dear, are you feeling wick?"

"No, it's nothing, Jim," answered Clarice. There, before her, lay her own book. She opened it. It was her story, word for word and she had written it. Giddily she flew upstairs and thrust it deep into a drawer.

That evening she turned almost automatically to an inside page of the city weekly. She had never read the "Authors' Gossip" before. And there, on the top of the page, in huge headlines, was the question: "Who is the author of 'When We Were Young'?"

"The Publishers' Statement."

The Deciding Comparison.

Clarice devoured the long article that followed. The publishers announced that they had received the manuscript, written in longhand, and apparently the work of an amateur, six months before. A cursory survey of the story, they said, had revealed a novel of no uncommon quality. It had been read with enthusiasm, that even the most hardened reader in the firm was not proof against its setting of country life, its truth, its fidelity. Its scorn of the picturesque had demanded instant publication. And the reading public had endorsed it by purchasing 50,000 copies of it. But who was the author? The publishers' statement that they did not know was believed to be genuine. It was no advertising scheme. Somewhere in America a genius lay hidden, watching with amusement the frantic efforts of the public to discover her identity—for of course it was a woman!

Clarice let the paper fall. She had not the dimmest idea of the value of her book to her. How much was it worth? A hundred dollars? Two hundred? Jim did not need that badly. And to reveal the truth to him, she saw the slow strangeness that must follow. Simple as she was, she almost intuitively discerned the results of publicity. Her husband's inability to live the new life that would open before her struggle between the old and the new. And Jim was very dear to her.

And then . . . she blushed as she thought of that other reason that bound them together in bonds that none might break.

"Clarice! Clarice, dear!"

"Jim, dear!" she answered.

"And what was a wretched old, stupid novel in comparison with Jim?"

Bridal Cakes.

Bridal cakes sometimes last longer than bridal pledges. At Chardon, O., a man and wife announced recently that they had had the fruit cake made to celebrate their wedding 35 years ago. But a Chicopee (Mass.) man says he has intact the one baked for his parents, who were married Feb. 11, 1850.

Old Isaac's Gratitude

By Mrs. F. A. Walker.

PART II.

OLD Isaac was very much pleased when he found that John really wished to help him, so they put out the lights and waited.

The next day John met the boys for soon they saw the boys creeping along the road and up to the barn, and then a tiny flame sprang up.

John was out of the house in a second, but the boys did not recognize him because he wore one of old Isaac's caps and coat.

When the boys came to the house old Isaac opened the door before they could start the fire there, and when they found he had come to see him the boys ran and did not come back.

John stayed a while and talked with old Isaac, who showed him his collection of birds and animals which he had found either dead or dying.

The next day John met the boys who had set the fire by old Isaac's barn, and they told John he should have been along to share the fun. "There wasn't much fun, though," said one. "Old Isaac had someone there to help him, so we ran off."

"I think you ought to be ashamed to plague the old man," said John. "He never has done anything to us, and just suppose the barn had caught fire and burned to the ground. I guess you fellows would have been sorry. Or if the old man's clothes had caught fire and he had been burned I know none of you would have wanted that to happen."

"We never thought of that," said one of the boys. "We wanted some fun and to see old Isaac scamp back and forth."

So the boys agreed never to call old Isaac names or bother him again.

One day old Isaac met John on the street. "Don't you go to school?"

Clothes an Expression of Individuality

The Matter of Feminine Dress Is an Art by Itself With French and Russian Women, and One Her American Sister Would Do Well to Learn.

SOME women still half suspect it is wicked to spend any amount of time or money or thought upon clothes when they should be considered a real part of the business of life.

The French and Russian women, more than any others, make their clothes show them to be individuals. Even if a gown bears the mark of a celebrated couturier, it will suggest its indefinable fitness for her, a suggestion of herself.

Indeed, to a woman of these nations her apparel is merely an opportunity for the exercise of her art of self-expression. Never is her gown the chief object in the eyes of the beholder. Her hat, her hair, her shoes, her gloves, the fragile daintiness of her bodice and the trimmings, all are not separate parts of her apparel to the French woman, but part of the picture made to describe her.

If American women have been backward in this display of individuality through dress, it is in part because they have lived under the restrictions of puritanism. But it is very evident that we are outgrowing all such influences. The unrest in the fashion world and the constantly changing styles have an underlying cause deeper than mere feminine fickleness of mind. Women are no more willing to wear something which every other woman has, so that as soon as a style reaches the popular stage, women demand a change.

The desire for distinction in clothes is much akin to individuality. Just so, to avoid the popularity of one's own garb, which is always possible when purchased in the shop, many women have their clothes made at home, so that the originality and beauty of them, suited to themselves, shall be exclusive.

As an aid to such women are the styles in these columns designed, and the varied uses of materials suggested for the one design make the result distinctly individual.

A practical afternoon frock is here shown suitable for a delightful combination of velvet broadcloth and organza. The model at the right pictures the effect of such, while the model at left shows a novelty stripe silk combined with plain silk and chiffon.

The former suggestion offers a pleasing contrast in the bodice of a tiny coat of velvet finished at the neck by a crisp wide frill of white organza. Long sleeves of the same organza, with the slightly elongated armhole, while a plain vest front of broadcloth, matching in color the velvet, completes the waist.

Bordeaux red would be a pretty color for this frock, and the use of gray squirrel on the bottom of the skirt would prove most effective. However, a trimming of velvet adds its share to the beauty of this skirt in the form of five very deep points inserted at intervals.

Cut circular and at the same time gathered, the fullness of this skirt is twice restrained at the hips by cordings. A stripe silk for this design might be of a dark bottle green background with stripes of brown or tan. Or a dark blue with either tan or green or gray stripes would be pretty. Plain silk to match the background is inserted as points in the skirt, and forms the little coats of velvet. But the soft plaid collar may offset the color seen in the stripes, and either that or the silk of the coat may be used for sleeves, while the stripes fill in the front of the bodice.

Fables of Every Day Folk

By SOPHIE IRENE LOEB.

The Small Income and the Big Tip.

ONCE upon a time there was a young man. He was a clerk in a store and earned $15 a week. He had ambitions. He wanted to advance in his work and to make money, so he applied himself diligently and soon was made buyer of his department.

It was a very small department, but a good beginning, and gave him $5 more per week. In this new position, therefore, he met many drummers who had goods to sell him. And, in order to favor his work and thus make more of compliments and patronized him as drummer usually did. Many times they invited him to dinner.

At these dinners everything was served from soup to nuts, and the drummer usually magnanimously waived the waiter about the place before and after school and that will pay for his board. I will pay you for keeping my house and that will be enough for you and John to dress on. What do you say?"

JOHN and his mother were too astonished to reply for a minute, and then John said: "I am sure mother, then, thinks your offer as generous and splendid as I do."

John's mother said she would be only too glad to keep old Isaac's house and let John go to school, and so it was arranged that John was to go back to school at once, and as soon as the house was ready they were to move into old Isaac's home.

Old Isaac did not live to see John finish his education, but he left all the money to John, which made quite a large sum, so John went to college as old Isaac had wished him to do.

Why Children Crave Candy

Sugar in the body serves as the body's fuel, and is most important in the daily diet of everybody.

SUGAR we all require and over one-half of our foods are sweet in taste. Even mother's milk, upon which we and all mammals began life, contains sugar as one of its three important elements.

All children seem to be born with this natural craving for this important food element. Sugar in the body serves as the body's fuel and as our bodies are really great engines, sugar is its preferred fuel to keep us going.

No other food is more rapidly absorbed by the body or gives off energy more quickly, and when pure, sugar is a readily digested food of high nutritive value.

It is certain that man's vigor and disease resisting power come from the body's supply of sugar. That, however, does not mean that we should eat too much of it; for, though few realize it, sugar is present in very much of our food. Meat has it; grains have it; it is found in milk, and in generous proportion in the vegetable kingdom.

Every atom of starch we eat has to be changed into sugar before it can be used by the body.

Candy eating is said to be the dietetic sin of this century, and it is denounced by both mothers in Israel and diet reformers.

They confront us with the terrifying statement that candy eating helps decay one's teeth. But we know better nowadays. We know that if one's teeth are kept always scrupulously clean it makes little difference what we eat.

Sugar has really great antiseptic qualities as is shown by its use in preserving fruits. The disapproval of sugar eating really arises from the fact that every child wants it and will get it if he can. Having gotten it he eats too much of it, showing us that it is often the abuse and not the use of a good thing that gives it its bad reputation.

Now as a fact these natural and strong cravings in human beings always mean something worth thinking about.

They are the crystallized results of hundreds of generations, and they are perfectly normal and natural instincts. Sugar is necessary. The real harm done by candy eating is that it is as a rule eaten at the wrong time. It should never be eaten between meals, for it has the effect of depriving the child of an appetite for his next meal, which probably he needs a great deal more than he needs an overdose of sugar.

But if eaten at the end of a meal—after being satisfied with nourishing food—no harm is likely to follow, as only a small quantity of candy will then be wanted.

Great alarms have been raised by some regarding the adulterations of candy. But glucose is not more unwholesome than cane sugar—only cheaper. The coloring matter in candy is used in such small quantities that in the amount of candy consumed by a normal person might manage to eat it would do him little or no harm. In fact, if candy hurts children it is surely the fault of the unwise parents, and not of the candy.

To Relieve Prickly Heat

PERSONS with bad complexion and with thin skin are most susceptible to prickly heat. The disease is a congestion of the skin which shows itself in groups of very red elevations. It is usually accompanied by profuse perspiration, which only aggravates the eruption by stinging and irritating it.

The trouble is due to three causes: Too much clothing, too vigorous exercise and tenderness of skin in those who are debilitated or ill-cared for. Unfortunately very few persons know how simple the remedy is. A solution of bicarbonate of soda in the bath will cure prickly heat in a mild form. If the case is severe the solution should be mopped over the affected areas as frequently as their state of irritation seems to demand.

In the meantime it is necessary to keep as quiet and cool as possible and to eat no heating foods. If these rules are carried out a case may be cured in a day or two. External use of blamuch mixed with talcum powder also relieves the itching.

Treasures in City Waste.

THE St. Vincent de Paul Society of Brooklyn, N. Y., by way of a service to the people, looks over the city's waste to recover articles that have been thrown away unintentionally. Things found last year ranged from a $500 roll of bills and a solid gold watch in an old vest pocket, to two healthy specimens of the rubber plant. Bureaus of laundry are the most frequent item.

Soldiers are forbidden by international law to pretend to be dead or wounded with the object of taking the enemy at a disadvantage.

Horsehair cushions have been found to provide enough elasticity to counteract all the vibrations of aeroplanes and make possible the use of magnetic compasses by British aviators.

Canada's population now exceeds 8,000,000, according to a recent estimate from Ottawa.

Here is Where "Mr. Doody" Makes Such a Hit With Miss Murgatroyd, the Office Queen, That He Calls Her "Mabel" and Isn't Jabbed With a Hatpin, Either.

By Paul West.

SAY, I want to make one remark about this here Alley. They don't work such a many hours in the day, but while the Street's open there's enough happenin', any day, to call it a week in any other place! Bing! goes the startin' gun, an' the crowd's off in a bunch, an' from then on till the finish they ain't one dull page!

An' shifit! A guy come downtown in the mornin' in his own gurgler, with diamonds for headlights an' the gaso-line tank full o' champagne, an' a roll in every pocket so big it takes a shoe-horn to get it in or out, an' by 3 o'clock he's lucky, instead o' still drivin' his Siambang Six, if he's still got the price of a tin Lizzie!

It goes the other way, too; like this here new Mister Hoogley, the head clerk in our place, the North American Investment Co. A month ago, they tell me, he didn't have a jitney outside his sal'ry, but he hears Sylvester, the manager, talkin' with old Em Hatch, the president, an' grab off a tip on some stock, an' the other day he buys himself a diamond as big as a glass-eye, an' a Ford!

It's a great place, the Alley! I don't know whether to take off your hat to some guy you meet, for fear he'll be down to cleanin' your shoes the next minute; an' it ain't safe to insult even a White Wings, because by night he's liable to be runnin' over you in his car. "Get off the sidewalk!" It is one seckind; "Make way for the Napoleon o' the street!" the next. An' I never know when it's goin' to hit you!

Not that it's hit me yet, but sumpin' else has—sumpin' me friends wouldn't believe could happen me in a hundred year. I'm bugs on a skirt! Uh-huh! No, it ain't Genevieve O'Reilly, the flapper, I happened to know that she works here, an' she tipped me off to the job; but—Oh, well, I might as well slip it all to you in a bunch—none other than Miss Murgatroyd, privet stenog to Mister Sylvester, the manager. You know, the laughy queen what couldn't understand my line o' conversation when I started in workin' here, an' says "I beg your pawdon" about every other word! Nerve, hey? Well, keep the receiver up to your ears till you hear the rest of the messidge—she's just as daffy over muh!

William Tells of the Prize Peach in the Whole Orchard

YESSIR, the prize peach o' the whole orchard, ingaged to that guy Hoogley I was mentionin' just now, has gave him the gate an' tell for William Doody. Excuse me, that's the word! I never even had to reach up in the tree an' pick her, an' even if it's near a week since it happened I ain't quite sure yet just how it came off. All I know is it's "Willie to me, an' Mabel" to her, an' I'm feelin' so mushy I'm afraid to touch my face with my finger for fear I'm that soft it would leave the mark.

Don't ask me how it started, as the guy said who fell off the tree, Mister Sylvester sent me in the little office where she has her typewriter to get sumpin' off her, a couple o' times, an' I had to wait for her to get finished. Settin' there while she took her own sweet time about it, I started gettin' kind o' sore, because she'd write a little bit an' then kinder knock off an' reach up an' fiddle with her back hair, tuckin' it up where it had come down, y' know. "Would o' been jusin' it me to not her why she didn't nail th' wig on tight in the first place, only I didn't s'pose I'd get any come-back except the regular "I beg pawdon!" an' I was a little tired o' that, so I didn't say anything. Then I happened to notice her hair didn't look phony like Ethel's—remember, Mister Hadley's stenog?—but the real thing, wid little curls around back o' the ear an' all that! An' her hand, when she put it up to fix the hair—Oh, well, what's the use! It was sure no trouble at all for to keep on lookin' at her, an' if she'd o' kept me waitin' till the whistle blew I wouldn't o' minded.

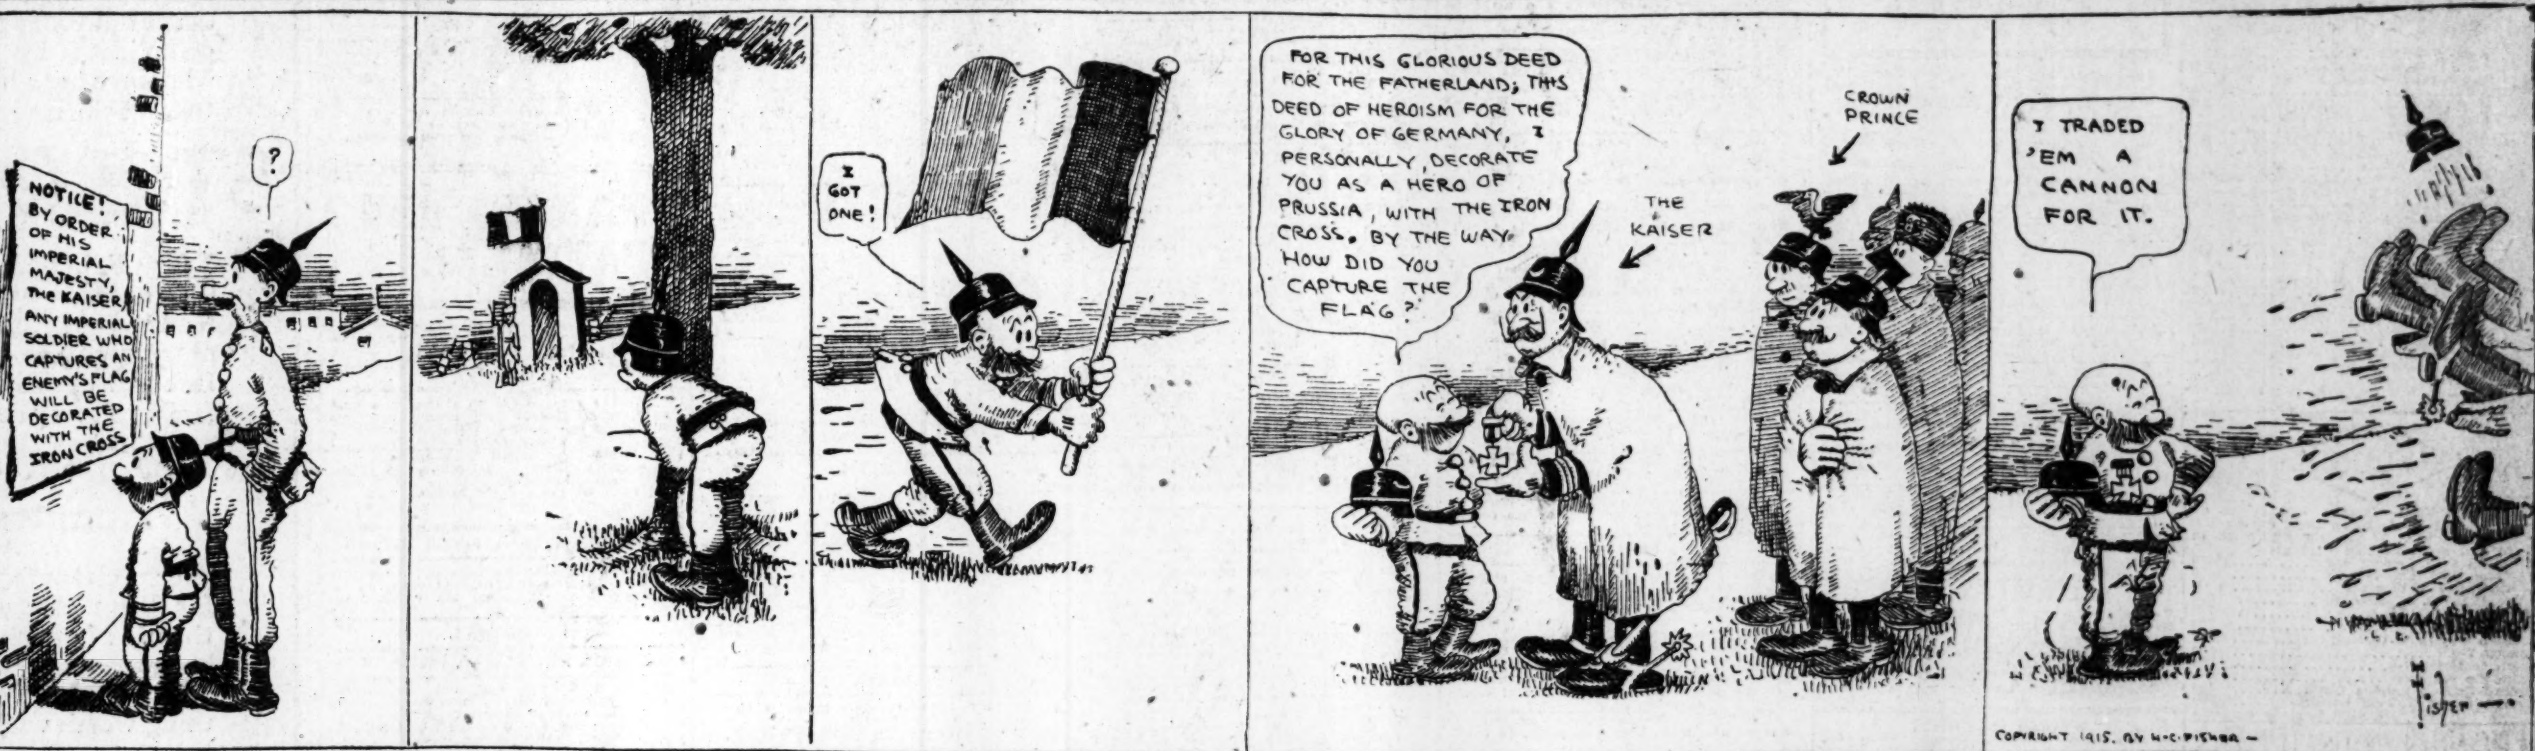

I didn't say anything to her, o' course, about it, an' she never got wise; but it got so I kinder waited for Mister Sylvester to send me in their every mornin', an' the longer she kept me waitin' the better I liked it.

er an' bought his car; but I hadn't been so interested then. Now, though, I hated him, an' when I saw him comin' out o' Miss Murgatroyd's room a couple o' minutes later, with his face lookin' like he'd just got a messidge sayin' th' bank had bust—well, foolish as it sounds, it was the welcome picture I'd seen in a long time.

I was takin' back the copy to Miss Murgatroyd from Mister Sylvester, an' when I went in her room I could see she was sore about sumpin', an' it made me mad. I don't know how I opened my mouth, but I did, an' I say, says I: "I beg your pardon, Miss Murgatroyd, I says, tryin' to use the swellest language I could, "but is they anythin' the matter?" I says, "Matter?" she says. "What do you mean?" "Why," I says, gettin' so bold I was scared o' myself, "I was noticin'—it ain't any o' my business, but if any guy—I mean sent—gets fresh with you at any time—well, you know what I mean. I was lookin' at me hard, an' like as if she thought I was crazy, but before she could ask me what I meant I ducked, wonderin' if I wasn't clean bug for makin' any such break as that."

William Takes Courage and Grows Confidential

THE next mornin' when Mister Sylvester sent me in her room I hated to thinkin' maybe Hoogley would come in while I was there an' hand me one, because I supposed o' course she'd told him. But she was unusual pleasant, an' says, "Good mornin', Mister Doody," she says.

William Braces Up and Talks to Miss Murgatroyd

THEN one mornin' while I was waitin' for her to finish th' Daily Stock Letter she has to run off for Sylvester every day, an' wishin' I could rob a bank or sumpin' an' make a million or two an' dump th' whole wad down th' back of her pretty neck for a joke, who comes in but this feller Hoogley—the head clerk—lookin' as chipper as one o' them full-page clothin' ads. He don't see me when he comes in, but starts right 'round Miss Murgatroyd, an' on my word, he was jusin' ter kiss her, when she lets out a little yip an' puts up her hand. Then Hoogley sees me an' tries to look natural. Th' next minute Miss Murgatroyd slips me a paper I'm waitin' for and I goes out. But if I could o' done it I'd o' gave Hoogley th' heel!

I'd heard all about him an' her from Smithy and Wiggin's an' th' rest around th' place, and how he was expectin' to marry her when he made a little more money, an' all that, an' how he'd just cleaned up a nice little wad for a start-into my bean. But th' next mornin' when I went in with th' copy for the Daily Stock Letter she was up at me an' hands me sumpin' done up in tissue paper.

"Good mornin', Mister Doody," she says. "Seem' you have such excellent taste in ties I thought I would like to see if I couldn't please you." "Did you buy this?" I ask, lookin' at the tie, for that's what it was. She blushed. "An' y' think it wouldn't please me? Why, if 'twas pea-green—the color of a brick 'twould be th' most beautiful thing in th' world, barrin' one, an' that one is!" An' just then who comes in but Hoogley. He sees me standin' there with th' tie in my hand, and lookin' at her, an' I thought they'd be murder! But he just stands lamppin' me, and out I went, majestick-like! I never touched the ground once, either!

Th' first thing I did was to put th' new tie on, and when Hoogley came in th' Trade Room a little while later I thought he'd drop dead from the shock. But he didn't say anything. "Aha!" thinks I. "He gives it up!" An' now if I was brave before why wouldn't I be more so?

This night I'd o' like to see Miss Murgatroyd get away without my at least makin' th' stab to escort her! I was th' first out when th' day was over, an' right alongside o' me, on th' other step, was Hoogley, th' neither of us speakin' to th' other. Then out she came, lookin' like th' Queen of England, Germany, Ireland an' France all rolled into one, she was that beautiful. Hoogley, th' sight of her an' not any gag an' blush an' fall all over my feet when I stepped out to speak to her.

UT she understood what I meant, an' without a look at th' simp that was standin' there with his eyes poppin', she says: "Good evenin', Mister Doody! This is a pleasant surprise!" An' up th' street we go, with nobody among all them millionaires what we passed with anything on yours truly! As we sauntered along by a multimillionaire's office there he was, just comin' down th' steps to get in his big car. Everybody stopped an' kinder fell back. "Look," says Miss Murgatroyd, puttin' her hand on my arm—yessir, right on my arm an' squeakin' it a little, too, and with us not yet out o' sight o' th' office. "Look," she says, "I'm, I says, wit my eyes on her. "I mean," she says, blushin', "at him."

"Who's he?" I says. "Richest man in the world," she says. "Except one," says I. She know what I meant, but they're all alike—they all like to hear you say it. "Who's that?" she says.

We was at the trolley now. It was my last chance, and what a good one! I gives her the eye straight; then I says: "Me, Mabel! I was reachin' out my hand to grab her, but I was too slow, because she was on the car like a shot."

and all I could do was stand there, swellin' up, th' happiest guy on earth. I'd called th' queen o' them all "Mabel," and she hadn't jabbed th' hatpin in me! Wow!

IF you sit in The Game, you've gotta know one of two things—how to lose or when to quit.

Summer Aftermath. YOU don't remember me, do you? I met you at the seashore. "That's strange, I don't seem to recall you." "Why, I gave you a ring to remember me by." "Let me see, which ring was it?" World is full of people who think it is going to rain every time they see a cloud.

Don't Ever Let Anyone Tell You This is a New One. MURPHY'S a regular patrolman, ain't he? "Nope. Fly cop." "Detective, eh?" "Nope. Belongs to the aeroplane squad."

How Sanatogen Relieves Poor Digestion and Nerve Strain. DIGESTION and the nervous system are interdependent. For while the products of digestion nourish the nerve cells, the nerves in turn control digestion. Thus if aught wrongly effects either—the nerves or the digestive organs—the other also must suffer. When, for instance, worry, overwork or shock interferes with digestion, the resultant lack of nourishment weakens the nervous system, causing nervous strain. This nerve weakness then reacts and still further disturbs the faulty digestion. At such times Sanatogen is specifically helpful—first, because it is so easily assimilated by even an enfeebled digestion, and, second, because Sanatogen's chemical union of purest protein and organic phosphorus furnishes precisely the two elements most needed to restore not only the weakened digestion but the impoverished nerve cells as well. This explains why Col. Watterston, the famous American editor, was able to write: "I do not think I could have recovered my vitality, as I have done, without this Sanatogen operating equally upon the digestive organs and nerve centers." And why Hon. Wm. E. Chandler, former Secretary of the Navy, wrote: "Sanatogen is a pleasant nutriment for cases of impaired digestion. It strengthens without irritating and promotes vitality in feeble folk." It also explains the striking endorsement of the medical profession as expressed in signed letters from over 21,000 physicians who have watched the work of Sanatogen in countless cases. And it gives you the reason why we are so confident that Sanatogen can help you—when you give it an opportunity. Sanatogen is sold by good druggists everywhere in three sizes, from $1.00 up.
